City All Set For Royalty

It's King's Weather!

Famous Sunny Alberta lives up to its own as the city of Edmonton awaits the coming of the Empire's King and Queen for the past 24 hours taking a rest at Jasper and now rolling down the line to this expectant city in a train of blue and gold.

Edmonton has been all set for the past day and night for the coming of these great and distinguished visitors and the realization of a lifetime for tens of thousands—to see their rulers—is about to be realized.

With its population boosted by early arrival of visitors, Edmonton went to bed last night in anticipation today of the greatest day in its 140-year-old history.

King George and Queen Elizabeth, resting at Jasper National Park since Thursday morning, come to the capital of the 34-year-old province of Alberta for a 6½-hour visit at 3:30 this afternoon.

The weatherman promises calm and clear weather. And with expectation of fine weather, Edmonton is all agog. An estimated 100,000 men, women and children are expected to increase the city's normal 80,000 population.

Their Majesties saw a new part of Alberta when they travelled down the eastern slopes of the Canadian Rockies from Jasper, through the coal mining areas and into Edmonton, gateway to the north and aviation centre.

JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., June 2.—With a bright sun shining in a clear sky, King George and Queen Elizabeth left Jasper National Park at 9:31 M.S.T., aboard the Royal train today for Edmonton.

DRIVER ROBBED BY KIDNAP DUO IN CITY TODAY

Taximan Reports Thugs Bound and Gagged Him —Relieved Of $14

Police instituted a search Friday for two young men who are alleged to have forced Stanley Ashcroft, city taxi driver, to take them out on a lonely road south of the city, and then bound and gagged him. Ashcroft reported the thug had taken $14 from his pockets and had left him lying beside the road while they drove off in his taxi.

Ashcroft told police that shortly after midnight the two men, both described as being of medium height, and about 20 years of age, asked him to drive them to 80 Ave. and 101 street. When they arrived at that address they stuck a gun in his back and ordered him to drive south on the Calgary trail and then west on a side road, Ashcroft stated.

Then they ordered him from the cab, bound his arms and feet with cord, gagged him, took the money from his pockets, kicked him into the roadside ditch and left him there as they drove back toward town in his taxi.

He managed to free his feet and walk to a farm house, where the farmer untied his hands and phoned police to come and get him.

The cab has not yet been recovered.

EUROPE'S HEADS ASSURE POPE OF PEACE DESIRES

VATICAN CITY, June 2.—Pope Pius told his cardinals Friday he had received "assurances of goodwill and of the resolve to maintain peace" from Europe's principal statesmen as a result of his recent overtures through Papal Nuncios.

The Pope said he also had "other information" which had given "greater hope that the considerations of noble humanity, the consciousness of inevitable responsibility before God and before history, and the right judgment of the true interests of their people would have strength and weight to induce the governments, in their efforts to reach a stable peace which would safeguard the liberty and the honor of nations, to think and to act in a manner calculated to reduce and conquer all obstacles to understanding."

The cardinals had come to pay homage to the Pontiff on his Saint's day.

In ever living memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 49th Battalion (Edmonton Regiment) who were killed in action, or died of wounds received at Sanctuary Wood, in Belgium, on the 2nd and 3rd June, 1916.

"These men were victorious in death."

PROROGATION IS NOW IN SIGHT FOR SATURDAY

OTTAWA, June 2.—Members of the House of Commons were idle last night, having worked themselves temporarily out of a job. Speedy passage of the remaining estimates and the delay necessary for re-printing of the mortgage bank measure, last major item to be disposed of, brought a Saturday prorogation in sight.

It was reported last night the Central Mortgage Bank bill would be disposed of quickly in the Senate and that there was a general expectation the house would prorogue Saturday.

Other business remaining to be dealt with before prorogation includes the bill to set up a salt fish board and the supply bill.

When adjournment time was reached at six o'clock last night all the estimates had been passed and there was no government business on the order paper.

A Friendly King and His Charming Queen Chat With a Former Choir Boy

At Mount Robson National Park, on their trip east through the Rockies, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth made a brief stop and met Edward Asquith Hargreaves, who sang as a boy chorister in the choir when the King's grandfather, Edward VII, was married to Queen Alexandra. Their Majesties are shown above, chatting with Mr. Hargreaves, who recalled vividly the Royal wedding and pageantry of the occasion. He has been living at Mount Robson for a number of years. At the left of the picture is Brigadier G. R. Pearkes, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Calgary, officer commanding Military District 13 (Alberta), who is travelling with the Royal party in Alberta and British Columbia.

Four Out of 87 Men Trapped in British Sub Saved: Hopes For All

By JAMES RESTON
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 2.—Officials of Buckingham Palace cabled a report of the accident which befell the British submarine Thetis to the King in Canada.

BIRKENHEAD, England, June 2.—Strapped in oxygen rescue masks, four of 87 men trapped in the partially submerged British submarine Thetis escaped safely this morning to the sun-flecked surface of the Irish Sea.

While the Thetis lay with her nose in the mud and her great, fin-like rudder glinting above the surface, admiralty workmen scrambled up her slippery slopes and considered cutting off her tail with acetylene torches to expedite the rescue of the others aboard.

Admiralty officials were confident all would be saved, and until a decision was reached about attempting a mass rescue, officers and men were ordered to escape two at a time in their oxygen masks—the Davis "lung" device.

The destroyer Brazen first sighted the Thetis' stern at 8:20 a.m. (12:20 M.S.T.) far out in Liverpool bay and soon small boats lei down from a ring of warships bobbed around the big gray tail. Experts clambered up her sides and tapped out reassuring messages to the men below.

FIRST SURVIVORS

First to reach the surface were Captain H. P. K. Oram, commander of the fifth British submarine flotilla, and Lieut. H. G. Woods. Capt Oram survived the H-47 and

Mr. Hargraves is 85 and with him were two grand-daughters, Ishbel and Marguerite Hargraves, who had ridden on horseback 51 miles to see the King and Queen, and three other girls who had travelled 18 miles and camped overnight at the station.

King, Queen Caught In Snowstorm On Glacier of Angels

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., June 2.—Caught in a snowstorm on the Glacier of the Angels, King George and Queen Elizabeth completed their experience of Canadian weather Thursday. They were supposed to rest, but instead walked four miles in the morning and afternoon and enjoyed themselves hugely.

The snow storm came as they were at the edge of the glacier which paints the side of Mount Edith Cavell with white. It lasted only a few minutes and Their Majesties said later they liked the idea of a snow storm hitting them at least once on their Canadian tour.

"Something we wanted but hadn't expected," the King said.

Their Majesties motored as far as the tea room near the edge of the glacier and then walked several hundred yards to the ice itself. The Queen was particularly interested in the fissures in the ice. They are only a few inches wide but hundreds of feet deep and reveal a beautiful series of blue and white color tones.

EXAMINED ROCKS

The Royal couple examined the unusual colored rocks which abound at the bottom of the ice and gathered specimens which they said they will take back to England for Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. On their way back to the hotel—an 18-mile drive—Their Majesties stopped about half-way, got out of the car and walked for two miles.

They were unlucky on their afternoon drive in that they didn't see any animals. In the morning

DRIVER DEATH CAR ON WRONG SIDE OF ROAD

CALGARY, June 2—Harry G. Wilmot, city auto salesman, was driving on the wrong side of the road and was under the influence of liquor when his car struck and fatally injured Charles W. Stout, 67, riding a bicycle, just outside the east city limits on Tuesday night, a coroner's jury found in its verdict at an inquest last night.

Evidence showed a car travelling up a hill struck Stout's bicycle at the top of the hill, causing a severe head and body injuries from which the cyclist died nearly 24 hours later.

Wilmot is free on bail of $1,000 after a court appearance Wednesday on a charge of causing grievous bodily harm to Stout by wilful misconduct while driving an auto.

Submarine

£-12 submarine collision in 1929 in which 21 died.

The "lung" apparatus looks something like a gas mask. Goggles cover the wearer's eyes, pincers close his nose and a wide covering fits over the mouth with a tube carrying oxygen from a container strapped to the man's chest.

Messages tapped through the submarine's walls told Oram and Wood when to quit the escape chamber. Their position was indicated by a burst of bubbles on the surface. Both were taken aboard the destroyer Brazen.

An hour or so later Chief Stoker Arnold and F. Shaw, a member of the crew, same to the surface in the same way.

MAY CUT OFF TAIL

The slowness of getting men out by the Davis escape method led the admiralty to consider cutting through the exposed tail of the submarine.

It was estimated there was sufficient air supply in the submarine to last until tomorrow morning.

Earlier unofficial reports indicated as many as 100 men might be aboard the vessel, but official statements fixed the number at 87.

ABOVE WATER

Eighteen feet of the 265-foot submarine were above water, but both escape hatches, one fore and one aft, were submerged. The Thetis left Birkenhead and submerged at 1:40 p.m. yesterday. She did not come to the surface on schedule three hours later, and search was started by 25 warships, Royal Air Force planes, salvage vessels and two submarines.

The destroyer Brazen came upon the stern part above water this morning, 18½ hours after the dive started, and shortly afterward the Admiralty announced that "the crew are at present safe," that there was "every hope of getting them all out" by the lung service, and salvage equipment was being sent to the spot.

This was about 14 miles northwest of Great Ormes Head, a Welsh promontory not far from where the craft dived.

IN DEEP WATER

The Thetis was in 130 feet of water. An official of the Mersey docks and harbor board said "There is a good prospect of salvaging the submarine."

There was no indication as to the cause of the trouble which befell the Thetis. She cast off at high tide Thursday morning from dock of her builders at Birkenhead.

Accompanied by a tug she cruised on the surface past the bar lightship at the mouth of the channel and made for Point Lynas, Angelsey, about 30 miles west of the mouth of the Mersey. She dived at 1:40 p.m. and when she did not reappear the tug's crew advised the admiralty.

Swiftly the search started the length of Wales' shelf-like northern coast and north as far as oSuthport.

MEN ARE CALLED

In Weymouth, Portsmouth and other ports men ashore were called to the warships and submarines by notices on movie screens, bulletin boards, telephone and semaphore.

Weymouth cinema audiences saw this notice flashed before them: "Service notice SOS: All ratings of first anti-submarine flotilla and sixth destroyer flotilla must return to their ships immediately."

There were joyous scenes at the Cammell Laird offices as news of the safety of the men spread. Mothers, wives, and sisters whose faces had drawn with worry were laughing and smiling. Some, overcome by the sudden relief from tension, were sobbing with joy.

Anglo-Japanese Tension Increases Over New Incident

SHANGHAI, June 2.—Anglo-Japanese tension increased Thursday as British embassy officials disclosed they feared a second British diplomatic officer was detained by the Japanese army in North China.

British officials believed Spear was held to give Japanese an opportunity to examine maps of Chinese-controlled areas which he had gathered.

HAMILTON, Ont., June 2.—Dr. Mazwell Finland, Boston, a world authority on pneumonia, told the Ontario Medical Association convention Thursday of a treatment of pneumonia that had reduced mortality among elderly patients from an average of 60 to 27.

Dr. Finland said best results had been obtained through use of a combination of specific serum and sulfapyridine.

Specific serum, used for the past five years in Boston, alone had reduced mortality by one-half, he said. He said recent investigations in Boston showed the new discovery, sulfapyridine, had demonstrated its superiority over sulfanilimide as well as over specific serums alone.

Edmonton's Welcome

The King and Queen come to Edmonton today, to spend a few all too brief hours driving about its streets, visiting its points of interest, meeting persons prominent in public life, learning something of the size, appearance, location and importance of this frontier city. They have journeyed across Canada in what has become a triumphal tour in the finest sense of the word, welcomed everywhere by fitting ceremonies and spontaneous popular enthusiasm. Nowhere has the reception tendered them been charged with more heartfelt cordiality, inspired by sounder loyalty, or expressed deeper feelings of esteem and regard. May their stay here be pleasant, their contacts happy, and the memories such as they will like to review in the days to come. That is the wish and hope of the people of the city which today is their honored host.

The Common Bond

Edmonton is a cosmopolitan city. Its people have come from many lands. They speak many tongues, trace their descent to many races, worship at many altars. But they have a common bond of political kinship. They live here in security, peace, freedom, justice and tolerance, shielded by the might of the great Empire whose Sovereigns are their guests today. They are in their several ways contributing to build up and strengthen this part of the Dominion, to develop its resources, enrich its culture, and work out increasingly wholesome conditions of life.

This we are able to do because of the personal liberty we enjoy and the immunity from outside interference guaranteed to us by citizenship in a powerful Empire. By none are these things better known or more heartily appreciated than by some who came from lands where freedom is a stranger and security does not exist. These, along with their townsfolk of other origins, will join to pay honor and do homage to the King and Queen, who personify the Commonwealth of nations whose residents everywhere live in freedom and safety.

The Friendly Note

Edmonton's welcome to Their Majesties will of course be a tribute of loyalty to them as Sovereigns of Canada, a pledge of our devotion to them and what they represent. But it will be far more than a formal recognition of the deference due to the occupants of the Throne.

While the King and Queen came to Canada as strangers they are strangers no longer, and never again can be. They have won the affections of the Canadian people in their own right. Their conduct has gained for them a nation of personal friends. They have moved among men and women of all ranks, not as superiors condescending to those of low degree, but as a man and woman of kindly nature, genuinely eager to get acquainted, to understand, and to give credit and encouragement and approval as opportunity offers.

This attitude has touched the deep sensibilities of Canadians everywhere. It has evoked for the Royal guests a reciprocal cordiality. In the language of the street, the King and Queen have shown themselves to be "regular" people. Even where they have not yet gone, this impression has spread, and assures them in advance the warmest of welcomes. One gathers that, despite all the restrictions imposed by ceremonial functions, our Visitors have got to the heart of things and feel themselves at home in Canada. That is as Canadians would have it, and to none is the thought more gratifying than to the people who live in Edmonton, in the territory of which this is the metropolis, and in the province of which it is the capital.

A Day to Remember

This is a red letter day in the history of Edmonton, of central and northern Alberta; and officially of the province. It is the privilege of the city to be the place where residents of this vast and richly endowed section of the Dominion assemble to greet the King and Queen. And, as the capital city, it is the point where the provincial authorities will pay their tribute.

There is no local precedent for the events of today. The occasion is wholly unique. Never before has a ruling monarch set foot in the Dominion. Edmonton, and Alberta, will appreciate that they are included in the itinerary of the first of such visits to Canada. Those whose good lot it is to take part in the demonstration of welcome will cherish the memory; those who by reason of sickness or other uncontrollable circumstances are unable to be present will sense very real regret. It is an event of a lifetime, the first of its kind for dwellers here.

In the normal course of events it cannot be expected that another Royal tour of Canada can be made in the near future, perhaps not for many years. The King and Queen are busy people, with many demands upon their time. That consideration also lends value to the opportunity Edmonton people, and those who join with them from other points, will have today.

But—there will be a very general hope that this visit marks something of a new departure, and that hereafter journeys to the oversea dominions will become parts of the regular program, in which case Canadians—and Albertans—may hope to see Their Majesties again in due course. That certainly will be the wish of the people of this city and province.

Editorial Notes

There is cause for satisfaction in the report that Canadian industries reporting to the Bureau of Statistics are employing more persons than a month ago and more than a year ago. Alberta industries, it is also gratifying to note, show a corresponding betterment. Neither nationally nor provincially is the gain large, but that there has been a gain is good news.

The publisher of the famous Col. Drew article on the Bren gun contract denied before the public accounts committee at Ottawa that the article imputed fraud to anyone concerned. He might be asked to explain just what it was intended to impute. Craw-fishing now can't redeem the article or those responsible for it from the charge of muck-raking.

The British air ministry is said to be building pursuit planes which can do 520 miles an hour on an even keel and 720 miles when they take a dive. Another point which will be noted with interest in a couple of European capitals is that the air ministry can get these planes in any number it needs, from British factories or from factories in the United States.

Having accepted Dr. Manion's proposal that a joint committee be created, including senators and commoners of all parties, to discuss defence measures outside the limelight, Hon. Ian Mackenzie added the committee will be set up at the present session if opposition members wish. They probably won't, because the session is nearing an end. But the offer will for the interval achieve the purpose of the proposal, that of preventing a too wide advertising of the country's defences—and lack of them.

Current Comment

They Should Get Together

The Tory party seems to be having difficulty with its defense policies. Here is Howard Green urging military roads through British Columbia at the same time as Senators Meighen and Griesbach are opposing them. Mr. Green is also urging arsenals and fortifications at a time when Conservatives are attacking Hon. Ian Mackenzie for going ahead with those very plans.

Criticism of defense policies is a healthy sign, for it shows we are taking interest in a vital matter. But since the Conservative key men do not like the Liberal program, the country is entitled to know what their own policy is. Perhaps Dr. Manion will clear it up once and for all.—Vancouver Sun.

The Press and War News

Unless Hon. W. D. Euler thinks that the public should be refused all access to news of world events his insinuation that newspapers have a responsibility for the view that war is inevitable is far astray.

Mr. Euler's contention that such a view prevails must also be questioned. Neither in Canada nor in Britain is there resignation to the thought that war cannot be avoided. The fact is that it has been avoided despite one critical situation after another.

Rearmament and other defence measures are not preparations for certain war, nor are they so regarded by the public generally. On the contrary, with the growth of democracy's armaments comes increased confidence of continued peace. Precaution is not evidence of obsession.

Newspapers have rendered a service rather than a disservice in keeping the public well informed regarding the dangers in the international situation. Without public support and a widespread realization of the benefits of adequate protection the steps necessary for the maintenance of peace would be made more difficult.—Toronto Telegram.

Searchlight on Yugoslavia

It is not to be denied that there are those in Yugoslavia who believe that if she threw in her lot with the Axis Powers she would fare better than in company with Britain and France. Similarly, it would be idle to pretend that there do not exist hot-headed and politically inexperienced elements which seeing further than their noses, might fall for the blandishments of Berlin and Rome disguised as "self-determination." But none of these elements has any place either in the Government in Belgrade, or amongst its responsible leaders in Zagreb. Disruptive elements in the latter centre, and opportunist ones in the former, would not be able to launch Yugoslavia on a policy inimical to her own true destiny and the salvation of Europe at a time when Western democracies should play into their hands, and into the hands of the Axis, by neglecting Yugoslavia at this critical moment. The heart of the country is sound. Its instinct, profoundly, is democratic. The will to resist aggression is strong and vital. But the Yugoslavs are realists. They are more impressed by deeds than by words. Therefore it is to be hoped that the leaders of the Western democracies—British and France—will without delay take the necessary steps to make it possible for Yugoslavia to join the anti-aggression front. For that way lies not only Yugoslavia's own true destiny, but also the reinforcement of our own defence by a valorous and war-seasoned people. —The Fortnightly (London).

Confidence Is Essential

Canada expects to receive armament orders from the British government after a nine-month hiatus due to the unpleasantness caused by the Bren probe fiasco. Contracts totalling many millions of dollars may be placed if the United Kingdom can be assured that there will be no political muckraking.

Canadian manufacturers are equipped and eager to co-operate in bringing Empire defense to requisite standards. Canadian workmen are anxious to get down to do their part. Canada will make a contribution far greater than Canada made in the Great War if petty politicians and pogun critics will let them.

Britain must have confidence in Canada if she is to depend upon this country for supplies of munitions, for airplanes, for machine guns and other defense equipment. Major-General L. R. Lafleche, Deputy Minister of National Defence, and Mr. Maurice Ollivier, Commissioner at Ottawa that orders have been retarded by the futile investigation of the Bren machine gun contract. No one can estimate the loss to Canadian industry and Canadian workmen because of want of confidence on the part of the British War Office caused by unsavory charges of graft. Talk of rampant political patronage in regard to munition contracts naturally would destroy confidence in Canadian ability to produce defense equipment efficiently and at a fair price.

We had barely begun to co-operate with the Motherland in the production of machine guns when malicious attacks were launched. Two virulent anti-British political propaganda organizations can be dealt with, but the insinuendoes of self-seeking politicians present a more difficult problem.

If the Red-Flaggers and the pacifists are determined to destroy Canada's defense preparations of Canada, lawful means can be invoked to ensure that they get their just desserts. Canada's institutions are more enduring and more vital than any left-wing politician or self-seeking capitalist. The leaders of the Conservative parties should unite in building up the morale and fibre of the Department of National Defense instead of seeking to destroy or disturb those charged with responsibility for national security.

The bill passed last night provides for a Canadian defence purchasing board. Its personnel should be above reproach. A bill has been introduced in the British House creating a new Ministry of Supply and giving it sweeping powers to put British industry on a war footing, if necessary. The new Minister, Edward Leslie Burgin, will become a grand dictator of all supplies for government purposes, if the cabinet so decides. The bill makes provision for this, and also clothes the minister with power to force manufacturers to drop other work in order to produce for national defense. It allows him to take over entirely any firm which fails co-operate.

Barking and snapping at the minister's heels is not the British way. It should not be the Canadian way. Persons seeking to cramp and cripple national preparations should be brushed aside, if not treated as traitors. The Federated Malay States have contributed $100,000,000 in cash to Empire defense in the last twenty years, and have been publicly thanked by the British government for the magnificent cash contribution. That ought to make some Canadians blush with shame.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

This is one of the days when a columnist's work seems an impertinence. There will be only one topic today—the visit of Their Majesties. Trainloads of visitors will augment the local population. In Regina the visitors exceeded the local population. A shipload of Americans came to Vancouver, in addition to thousands of motor tourists. It's no lack of loyalty that kept me from waiting in line to see the King and Queen go by. I'm quite ready to shoulder a gun for my country, but possessing imagination, and having seen the royal couple in hundreds of photographs in the last few weeks, I had no difficulty in imagining how they looked as they drove by. They didn't miss my presence and, in theory, someone had a better look for my not being in the crowd. Some of the good ship Calypso's bunting did service in the hands of more volatile friends, but the skipper of the Calypso enjoyed a book, a cigarette and the quietness.

THE DAY THE KING GOES BY

But who is interested in reading a newspaper column on a day like this!

Here's a story from the London Chancery courts that could happen only under British justice. It's about a plucky little woman, the wife of a taxi driver, who took her own case before one of England's judges, winning the compliments of the court, of opposing counsel and the bar in general. She earned the soubriquet in the newspapers of "The Modern Portia" and "The Tenants K.C." Mrs. Florence Borders, fair-haired, slight, be-spectacled and aged 35, found herself sued by a mortgage and loan company, which asked for possession of her home, claiming she was three months in arrears on the mortgage. Mr. Justice Bennett looked surprised when the lady appeared in person to defend the case. Was she a lawyer? Would it not be wiser of her to take an adjournment and retain counsel?

TAXIMAN'S WIFE A MODERN PORTIA

"No," answered the defendant to both questions. The issue was perfectly clear, and she felt quite able to present her side of the case.

"I'm afraid you'll spend many a sleepless night," said the judge.

The trial hadn't proceeded very far before Mrs. Borders discovered her need for knowledge of law and court procedure. She asked for an adjournment, and very fairly the judge granted it. Several succeeding adjournments were granted the young wife, who spent her time in public libraries and in the law courts' foreclosures and contracts. Much surprised was the judge when finally Mrs. Borders announced that she was ready to proceed, and marched into court with piles of books and papers. Her counsel then entered a counterclaim for £500 alleging that the house was jerry-built of shoddy materials; she also asked for an injunction against the mortgage company, on the ground that a contract it had made with the builder was against public policy and ultra vires.

STUDIED LAW TO WIN SUIT

When news of the slashing attack of the common-school-trained housewife got into the papers, eight tenants' organizations and six mortgage companies' organizations began to exert watching briefs. Portia was having her day.

Crowds were unable to get into the courtroom when the young woman presented a 2½ hours argument in support of her contention that the contract was ultra vires. She challenged opposing counsel so frequently that at one point the judge brusquely agreed and said, "My dear, you are getting as bad as counsel."

HUSBAND OUT JUDGMENT TOO

When her husband showed nervousness and embarrassment in the witness box she said encouragingly, "Come, come; just tell us exactly what was wrong with the house."

Impressed with the lady's argument, Mr. Justice Bennett said, "You state your points very clearly and I feel inclined to agree with you. Unfortunately I am faced with the decision of a Lord Chancellor and two Lords Justices in the case of Turner against the Great Eastern Railway."

In the end, the judge held that Mrs. Borders was in rightful possession of the house, though he distallowed the counterclaim and the application for the injunction.

In the Appeal division, the husband of Mrs. Borders was successful in obtaining judgment for £150 damages for libel against the solicitors for the mortgage company. A letter had been written by the managing clerk, reflecting on Mr. Borders.

Granted that Mrs. Borders is gifted with courage and a methodical, analytic mind, the lawsuit is a tribute to British justice that safeguards the humblest litigant.

ONE MOUSE HOLE

When we built our log cabin in the Canadian woods, we were careful to see that no smallest hole should exist, through which the tiny creatures of the forest could enter during the Winter. We were especially urgent in caulking the places where the stovepipe and water pipes should be sealed. But, alas! at the drainpipe of the shower-bath, in a spot now inaccessible, there is room for mice to enter. One single hole nullifies all our elaborate protection elsewhere.

Like unto that mouse hole are the little defects in character which give an entrance into the life. One neglected duty, one favorite indulgence, one bad habit, will admit the evil that gnaws at the precious fabric of character.

Save us from seeing any sin as small. O teaching Father, May we guard life's many portals as sentries of souls. Amen.

Wants Royal Holiday

Editor, Bulletin: Why should Edmonton be the exception by declaring only a half-holiday in which to celebrate Their Majesties' visit. It surely is not very complimentary to our Royal guests. All subjects of King George should be given full time to celebrate royally such an occasion.

The many phone calls I've received complaining that a full holiday had not been declared is evidence of much unnecessary disappointment. ALICE McGREGOR.

Victoria Day

Editor, Bulletin: In a recent issue I noticed an article in connection with Victoria Day. It stated that this was made a holiday in 1898 and remarked that "it was still being observed."

I was in Ottawa at the time and sitting in the Senate chamber I heard the bill read making Victoria Day "a holiday in perpetuity in Canada. So I hope it will not be thought strange, when in future years this holiday is still observed.

"So-called Music"

Editor, Bulletin: In these trying times it would be thought that most people would like good music, but while listening on the radio for a pleasant program we got instead this dreadful modern noise called jazz or swing stuff. It would not be bad if it was confined to that, but when it comes to jazzing really fine compositions such as "Ameno Sky" that is desecration. However, everyone to his fancy as the old man said when he kissed his cow.

Wants Full Holiday

Editor, Bulletin: In every other city throughout the Dominion of Canada a whole holiday was proclaimed when Their Majesties arrived. What right, may I ask, has Edmonton to be an exception to the rule? As this is the first time in history that a King and Queen have ever crossed the Atlantic, and in all probability it will be the last, surely a goodness the City of Edmonton can show its respect to Their Majesties by closing its stores for the day. To open them is most disloyal. I trust Edmonton will in the end be able to take her place with the other cities of the Dominion by proclaiming a whole holiday. God bless Their Majesties.

Chinese Grateful

Editor, Bulletin: The Chinese Benevolent Association is very grateful to the kind people who have sent gifts for the China Relief Fund from time to time.

Some donors have sent no name with their donation, thus making it impossible to thank them personally. To these we wish to express heartfelt thanks, and the assurance that all monies received by us go exclusively to help the relief work in China. There is an organization called the National Relief Commission in China to which our money is sent, whose work is entirely devoted to the relief of the poor sufferers of war.

On behalf of our suffering countrymen we thank all friends of China for we deem you as such when you are so willing to help her in time of distress.

"Have You Seen the Queen?"

Editor Bulletin: In my boyhood days in England we were told that to have seen the Queen entitled you to certain social privileges. Only those who had seen Queen Victoria were allowed to put their elbows on the table at meal times, for instance.

I am wondering what additional advantages might be open to those with the distinction of also having seen all the subsequent British sovereigns, and if my record in this respect can be equalled by other local residents.

In 1897 I saw Queen Victoria enter St. Paul's Cathedral to attend the service at her Diamond Jubilee celebration; King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra at the opening of Birmingham university; King George V. in Lewisham, London, and Edward VIII., who came here on two occasions as Prince of Wales, and I, of course, hope and expect to see King George VI. when he arrives next week.

As it is over a century since Queen Victoria ascended the throne, any resident who has had this record should be given a special seat at the forthcoming Royal reception.

"No, let's play bridge."

Teacher: "James, have you whispered with your self out of the corner?"

James: "Only 'wunst, ma'am."

Teacher: "Helen, should James say 'wunst'?"

Helen: "No, ma'am; he should say 'twicet'."

Counsel in breach of promise case: "How tell me, please, on the evening of the 16th, when you bade her goodbye, did she suffer you to kiss her?"

Rustic Defendant: "Well, I reckon now I did give her a kiss or two; but there wasn't much sufferin' about it as I could see."

Granny: "You girls are so useless nowadays. I don't believe you know even what needles are for."

Flapper: "What a dear old granny you are! Why, they are to make the gramophone play, of course."

"Here, have you paid your rates, Bill?"

"No, and I'm glad I didn't."

"How's that?"

"Oh, I got a form today which said 'Final application,' so it looks as though they are giving it up as a bad job."

"Don't eat your ice so quickly, Tommy. I once heard of a little boy who ate an ice too quickly and died when he'd only eaten half."

"What happened to the other half?"

"Why do you term your wife an angel?"

"Because she's always ready to fly, she's continually harping, and she hasn't an earthly thing to wear."

Jones called to see his friend Smith and, while waiting, there entered little Miss Smith, aged seven. Jones sat at the piano and played nothing he thought would appeal to the child. When he had finished he turned and said: "Well, what do you think of that?"

"I can't play, either," was the unexpected reply.

"It's odd how one's clothes react on one's mentality. Now when I'm wearing a business suit I'm all business; when I'm in evening dress, social matters occupy my attention, and when I'm in golf togs I don't think of anything but the game."

"Yes. And I suppose when you take a bath your mind is an utter blank."

"Listen," shouted a big man through the telephone box to a little man inside, "I've had that phone for twenty minutes and not said a word."

"Yes," said the little man, "I am talking to my wife."

"My wife ran away with my best friend."

"Heavens! Was he good-looking?"

SHARP PAINS SHOT THROUGH KNEES

Woman Suffered 10 Years

"Since coming here from England 10 years ago," writes a married woman, "I have suffered badly from rheumatic pains. I bought medicine, lotions, liniments, and have taken concoctions until I was tired spending my money. I heard of Kruschen Salts so often, that I thought one day I'd try that. By this time my knees were frequently full of terrible pains. I bought a bottle of Kruschen, and took a teaspoonful every morning. It had no effect. But my husband said, 'Persevere! Give it a chance to act.' Well, I did and before long my knees were nearly normal. I kept on, and believe me I am not like the same woman. I walked four miles the other day and felt fine, whereas before I could hardly walk across the floor."—(Mrs.) E.A.

What more need be said about the relief that Kruschen Salts can bring to sufferers from the pains and stiffness of rheumatism?

QUINTS' SURVIVAL SCIENCE VICTORY

NEW YORK, June 2—Under the caption, "Happy Meeting," the editor of the New York Herald Tribune says:

"Their Majesties were introduced to the Dionne quintuplets, or vice versa, it the other way about? Kings and queens are scarce enough there days, but quintuplets, all in rosy health and old enough to curtsy, are unique. So it was not so easy to say where the balance of privilege lay in this meeting of carefully sheltered and highly publicized human beings. Let us say that, formality aside, the honors were even, that they were on both sides to an accident of birth.

"But is this wholly true? The quintuplets, to be sure, were born such, but they owe their survival far less to accident than to medical science. Thus, royalty, in making their acquaintance, was viewing an excessively modern phenomenon, representing what a scientific civilization can do to preserve even the humblest lives.

"Mark the contrast to Their Majesties' experience of the day before, when, surrounded by dismembered and blind veterans, the King unveiled the National War Memorial and opened the Parliament in Ottawa. Here they were made acutely conscious of what the modern world can do to destroy life. Let us be glad for them that after that sad, if heroic, session they could on some occasion receive the fresh, live, their sparkling brown eyes and ready kisses."

YPRES BATTLE FOUGHT JUST 23 YEARS AGO

On June 2, 1916, Edmonton Regiment Aided In Great Fight

As hundreds of Edmonton Great War veterans turn out on Friday to welcome Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth—to line the streets and to be present in many other capacities—their thoughts fly back 23 years to June 2, 1916 when in the tip of the Ypres Salient, the Canadians fought one of the most terrific battles of the war.

On that brilliant day—warm, cloudless and ideal for summer in every respect save for the war, the Canadians once more saved the Ypres Salient and barred the road to the channel ports.

In this battle the 49th Bn., the Edmonton Regiment, many survivors of which are on Edmonton streets this day, covered itself with undying glory, as did all other units engaged.

The Canadian Corps had been recently expanded to three divisions. This battle, the Third Battle of Ypres consolidated the Corps into a well-night perfect war machine.

HOW THEY LINED UP

The Canadians held the major portion of the Ypres Salient from the latter part of March, when the 3rd Canadian division moved into the tip of the Salient and linked up with the mighty British Guards Division, just north of the Menin Road. The 1st Canadian Division was on the right of the 3rd Division and the 2nd Canadian Division was on the Corps right, occupying the famous St. Eloi crater.

Signs of German activity became apparent toward the end of May. On the night of May 30, the 49th Bn. on Mount Sorrel was raided by the Germans. The 49th "stood to" and peppered the oncoming Germans with rifle fire. Their rifles jammed and they went up over the parapet and met the oncoming hordes with bayonets, rifle butts and bombs. The raid was repulsed and enemy prisoners were captured. The next day the 49th was relieved and to the martial strains of Bonnie Dundee the regimental march headed into billets for what was supposed to be a rest.

Jutland was fought in the North Sea on May 31.

June 2 broke quietly in the Ypres Salient. Even an occasional bird twittered from the butt end of what was a branch of a tree in Sanctuary Wood—the section of the entire front offering probably less sanctuary than any other part.

As the land thereabouts was below sea level trenches were practically out of the question and sand bag "breastworks" were built up. The Germans spent most of the days knocking them down and the troops built them up at night. Travel through Sanctuary Wood by day was confined largely to sloping away over else crawling on hands and knees or pulling oneself along on the stomach. In those days the Germans would snipe a man or two with field guns.

The quiet of this lovely summer day did not last long.

Suddenly about 8 a.m. a terrific barrage burst forth from the German lines, probably the most heavily concentrated barrage of the whole war. It was trained on the Canadian lines in the tip of the Salient, from Hooge at the Menin road to approximately Hill 60 in the south. The sand bag breastworks offered little resistance and the defending troops were practically obliterated.

Canadian guns went into the unequal fight with abandon but they were heavily outshelled.

Soon, tall, close-cropped Wurtembergers came over in massed formation and advanced over the stricken, flattened area subjected to bombardment.

The Royal Canadian Regiment on the extreme Canadian left, the Princess Pats and the 8th Brigade, the C.M.R.'s took the brunt of the attack. Col. Buller of the Pats, a former A.D.C. at Rideau Hall, Ottawa, and son of General Buller of South Africa fame, was killed while rallying his men walking along the parapet.

Brig. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., who is an Edmonton visitor this day, was bombing officer of the 8th Brigade at that time and did heroic work in leading his bombers against the Wurtembergers.

While the Germans made a temporary gain, the Canadian counter-attack was quick and severe.

No sooner had the 49th got settled in their rest billets than they were called back to "the line."

Headed by the band the 49th marched up toward Vlamertinghe and Ypres. To the tunes of The Old Brigade and Bonnie Dundee they went up to deliver the assault to push the Wurtembergers back.

The 42nd Royal Highlanders of Canada, from Montreal, also went forward and brought early relief to the R.C.R. and Pats.

GEN. MERCER TRAPPED

Major-General Mercer of the 3rd Division was trapped in Sanctuary Wood and was killed. Brig. Gen. Victor Williams of the 8th Brigade was captured. Maj-Gen. (then Brig.-Gen.) Sir Archibald MacDonell, commanding the 7th Brigade, went to command the division and Maj.-Gen. (then Lt.-Col.) W. A. Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., commanding the 49th, took command of the 7th Brigade.

During the night of June 2-3 the 49th made ready for the counter attack and engineers, artillery and other service units did their part. The 52nd Batt. of the 9th Brigade and other units moved up. The 52nd was subjected to withering fire along the China Wall.

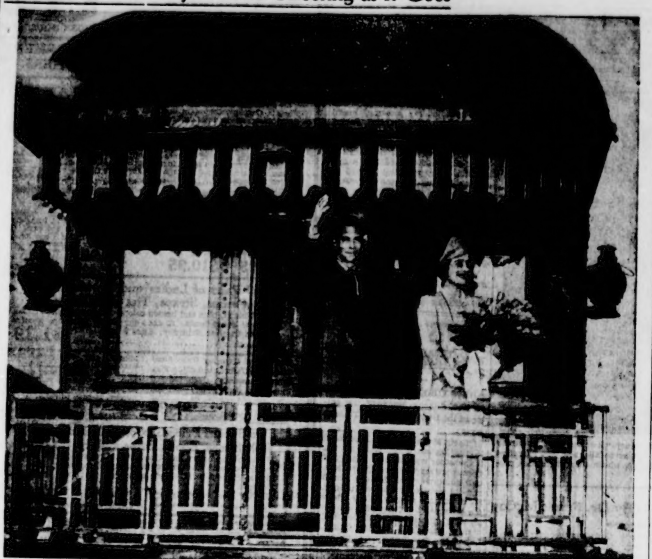
Early on June 3 the 49th "went over" in one of the most gallant attacks in the history of the battalion and succeeded in regaining some of the ground. The sudden counter-move and the determined nature of the assault surprised the enemy.

But this did not satisfy the Canadian higher command. A further attack was organized and on the night of June 14-15 units of the 1st and 2nd Divisions carried out an attack in a rainstorm and not only recaptured all ground lost, but pushed the enemy back beyond his starting point on June 2.

The attack was carried out without a hitch and gave further proof of the capacity of the Canadian Corps. Warm praise was showered on the Corps for its conduct throughout the two trying weeks.

The Canadians remained in the Ypres Salient for the rest of the summer of 1916 and in September moved south to the Somme where Courcelette, Moquet Farm, Regina and Desire Trenches and other battlegrounds again tested their capacity—a capacity which again was proved conclusively.

Crowd Follows Royal Train Cheering as It Goes



King George and Queen Elizabeth wave a smiling farewell to Chilliwack and the thousands of loyal subjects who greeted them. A second after this picture was taken the crowd began surging on the railway tracks and running along after the Royal train, cheering as they ran.

DATE WITH DANGER

By HELEN WORDEN

CHAPTER XIX

DUKE MARTIN was again called to his telephone by a feminine voice, but the tones of this one had a sharp edge and its owner wasn't asking for a date, she was demanding an interview.

"Very well, Miss Franklin," Martin said coldly. "If it is so important, why don't you come here at six?"

Mary's words spoken over her apartment telephone were equally cold. "No, Duke. We'll meet on neutral ground and it won't be your apartment or the Dove. Make it Peter's at one for lunch."

Ever since yesterday when Tom Ladd had ensnared her for trying to keep Clem Shirley out of the paper, Mary had only one thought in mind, to get Martin and warn him that he must stay away from Clem. In her hysteria over the affair she considered Pete's bar temper, she forgot to be afraid of Martin. Would he dare strike at her openly? Mary looked in the mirror and made a face at herself. She had the jitters. Crying did that. She had cried all night. The tears began to fill her eyes again. What a ninny. Crying wouldn't help. Tom was the editor. He had the right to censure her if he wanted to. No, he hadn't. She never wanted to see him again. No man had the right to talk that way to a girl. She hated him.

A poised and self-confident Mary Franklin met Duke Martin at Peter's a quiet, neutral little cafe, an hour later.

He looked impressive in his dark blue homespun suit, massive shirt and Charvet tie. A little too carefully planned, perhaps, rather flashy but certainly in character.

Mary's costume was more reserved; wine-red wool with a smartly cut black fur jacket. She smiled as she shook hands with Martin, but there was no commonise in her brown eyes. The headwaiter, recognizing them both, led the way to a table for two marked "Reserved".

Martin smiled. "You pull the same racket we do. Keep a couple of choice ones fenced in for special customers."

It was evident that the Duke was not in his best mood.

"Well, what do you want," he asked, as he and Mary sat down. A waiter hovered at his elbow.

Before she could answer, he said, "Don't talk, let's give the order to this gnat and get rid of him."

With the waiter sent scurrying on his business, Martin again put his question to Mary.

"Leave Clem Shirley alone," Mary answered. "Remember, the Janice French case isn't settled yet."

"I didn't come here to waste my time making fool promises."

"If you don't leave Clem Shirley out of the picture, I'll start Peter's on this lark," said Mary briefly. "You've got to stop seeing that girl."

"Your business is writing, isn't it? Ever try short stories?" Occasionally."

"Here's one without an end. Perhaps you an finish it." He studied the wine list with faint contempt. "What a lousy cellar they've got! I didn't run rum for Volstead." He beckoned to the waiter. "Two pints bottle Scotch highballs and let me see the bottle."

Patsing Mary a cigaret from his case and lighting one himself, he leaned back in his chair.

"I can vouch for the truth of this story," he said. "I've always thought it would make a damned good yarn provided it ended the right way. There was a clever young gal on a paper in a city not far from here who didn't always recognize trouble when she saw it. Some people have a hunch about danger and some haven't. Now that's why I'm still this side of Sing Sing. I can smell danger."

Mary's lips tightened. "You must have lost your sense of smell. I wouldn't call your position exactly healthy."

"Nor is yours." Martin snapped. "The gal in my story has her choice between living a long and happy life with her pretty boy managing editor. Oh, I'm not so dumb," he said, as an angry flash colored Mary's face. "Or passing up the wedding bells for a cold, while slab in a morgue just where a girl friend of hers landed, because she couldn't keep her fingers out of other people's business. Which'll it be?"

Mary laughed. "You talk like a dime novel. Drop the comedy. There's only one end to your story. The girl doesn't wind up in the morgue slab. She doesn't marry the managing editor, but she does save the life of a sweet child who might have landed in the morgue herself if your newspaper girl hadn't stepped in."

"I've warned you. For your health's sake you'd better stay out of my business and out of the Dove."

"The New York Gazette doesn't stay out of any honky tonk," Mary said sharply, "even if the chairs are covered with silk and the walls with tapestries."

She rose abruptly. "Well at least, Duke, we know where we stand.

I've just got time to make Janice French's funeral. Would you like to come along?"

"No, thank you."

The people who moved in the Frenches' social spheres were the sort that liked to be in good time for funerals. Although the notice in the papers had said "Services private," St. Thomas' was filled when Mary arrived. A dull, stodgy lot, for the most part, she thought. Old Mrs. Ward, Janice's great-aunt, hobbled in ahead of her. She wore a long black crepe veil over her black Persian lamb coat and she leaned on two canes. Mrs. Ward belonged to Janice's mother's people.

Mr. French, hi, slight figure looking even more frail in black took not the slightest notice of his wife's aunt. White head bowed, he knelt in prayer. Mrs. French was not there. Directly in front of the pew, resting on a blanket of pink rose buds, stood the delicate pearl grey coffin in which Janice lay. It was closed.

Thinking of Mrs. French, Mary almost forgot that she was there to get the story. With quick eyes she began searching for familiar faces and estimating the number of people present. In the left side front pews Mary recognized girls who'd come out the year Janice made her debut; Kathleen Hobson, crying gently; Mollie Tate, making a more successful effort to control herself; Bess Marlitt, a sulky expression on her pretty face, fidgeting, obviously uneasy. Once more at home in night clubs, Mary had seen her at the Dove several times lately, a spectacular girl with scarlet lips and boldly black eyebrows. Behind her sat Egerton Mapleson. Across the aisle, his wife. They hadn't lived together in years, but both in a vague distant way were related to the Frenches.

When Egerton wasn't at funerals, he was at his club. His white moustache moved up and down as he whispered something to Alfred French, a cousin of Janice's.

Mary had not yet finished counting faces when the services began. They were brief, the simple Episcopal burial services, the singing of the choir and it was over.

Later, at the office, in writing of many angles. A short distance farther on they spied a moose lying among the trees.

The bus halted again. Eight of its occupants got out with their cameras and spreading out like a skirmishing party cautiously advanced, fearing the moose would run away before they got close enough to take her.

The moose rose to her feet, but instead of running away rushed at them, throwing her head up and down. The photographers ran so fast one of them broke his camera. The moose had a young calf lying by her and that was why she drove off the intruders. She stopped chasing them after 50 yards and went back to the calf.

The new Curtiss CW-21 "Interceptor" plane is reported to be the fastest climbing military plane ever produced in the United States.

News Writers, Press Photographers Chased By Moose at Jasper

JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., June 2.—A group of press photographers and news writers who are amateur photographers were chased by a cow moose Thursday and it would have required a fast lens to have taken them as they scampered through the bushes.

The photographers and correspondents covering the royal tour had been up to see Mount Edith Cavell and as they were returning their bus came upon three mule deer which they photographed from it. Mary found that her story centred on Mr. French.

"Has Janice French's secret been buried with her," she tapped out on the typewriter, "or will it be told? This question was in the agonized eyes of her father today at her funeral. Who is responsible for my daughter's death?"

DON TAYLOR AGAIN HEADS POSTMASTERS

Vermilion Man Re-elected President at Close of Convention

Donald Taylor of Vermilion was re-elected president of the Alberta postmasters' convention unanimously Thursday afternoon at its concluding session in the Macdonald hotel.

All other executive members were re-elected except G. Calder, Bow Island, who declined to stand for re-election, his place being taken by E. M. H. Holmes of High River.

MEET AT LETHBRIDGE

Next year's convention will be held in Lethbridge, but its date has not yet been announced.

Secretary-treasurer of the association for the past five years, Arthur Foulds, Deiburne, handed in his resignation to the executive Thursday. He was presented with a silver tea set in recognition of his services to the association.

Similar presentation was made to H. Morgan of Didsbury, who served as president of Alberta Postmasters' Association for 11 years. Both presentations were made by T. P. Murphy, Ottawa, superintendent, supply and equipment department.

The new secretary-treasurer is to be chosen at an early meeting of the executive, it was announced.

Officers elected Thursday are: Donald Taylor, president; F. P. Walshe, Macleod, vice-president; L. MacDonald, Clairmont, H. Morgan, Didsbury, and E. M. H. Holmes, High River, executive members.

W. G. Ferrey, Drumheller, won the postal knowledge competition conducted at the convention by Dominion Secretary Charlie Griffith.

Members of the convention will view the royal progress Friday from reserved bleacher seats as guests of The Bulletin.

AIR RAID CELLS FOR ALL COMERS

LONDON, June 2.—Britons may now buy their air-raid shelters on the "never-never" plan. The government has decided to loan money to local authorities enabling them to buy shelters and sell them to householders on instalments which the British call the "never-never" plan.

Householders will have several years to pay the local authorities. Those who make less than $1,250 don't have to worry, anyway. The government gives them their shelters.

Ineligible Jobless Will Get Relief In Coast Province

VICTORIA, June 2.—The provincial government will contribute 80 per cent of the cost of relief for single unemployed in Vancouver who are not eligible for summer forestry camps if Mayor Telford thinks they should be put on relief, Hon. George S. Pearson, minister of labor, said Thursday.

The minister also said that single men whose registrations are accepted for camp will be given temporary relief until they go out. About 300 will go today to the camps which will accommodate about 1,000 all told.

In view of Mayor Telford's threat to send jobless to Victoria, Mr. Pearson said:

"If the mayor can afford to provide them with transportation here surely he has the money to give them temporary relief."

C.N.R. Gardener Is Complimented on His Flowers by Monarch

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

JASPER, Alta., June 1.—The King called a William Glass on Tuesday, chief gardener of the Canadian National hotels, to compliment him on his handiwork.

Their Majesties had been amazed and delighted at the floral display in their Outlook cabin and in the grounds.

William Glass is a proud man, but he didn't tell the King what lay behind those beautiful roses, the splendid gardens.

It was not until last April that Mr. Glass heard that roses would be required for Outlook cabin and Jasper Park Lodge, and that he would be expected to have his flower beds in bloom by June 1.

FORCED ROSES

He set to work and forced his roses, and Outlook cabin today is a bower of roses fit for a queen.

Then he forced outlook in his glass houses and set them out about a week ago.

Then came imminent tragedy; his gardens were all ablaze with the forced flowers, when frost descended two nights before the Royal visit.

COVERED UP FLOWERS

William Glass rescued triumph out of the disaster. He called on the housekeeper to collect every old sheet she could ignore. He got coverings of other kinds, and then covered up all his precious flowers. It was an all night job and a race against time, but they passed the night safely.

He had put out eight thousand flowering plants when the two degrees of frost descended, but he saved them all, and on Thursday the King called him and congratulated him on the splendid showing.

But the King didn't know about that night of anxiety two nights ago, when frost nearly laid them all waste.

Calder, of Bow Island, retired as an executive member of the association.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE TO SEE RULERS

Winnipeg Free Press Says King, Queen To Attend Church

WINNIPEG, June 2.—The Winnipeg Free Press said Thursday it had learned unofficially that King George and Queen Elizabeth would attend divine service Sunday in Portage la Prairie, 50 miles west of Winnipeg.

The newspaper added: "Following the service the Royal couple and members of their entourage will drive into Winnipeg and pay an informal visit to the Deer Lodge military hospital.

"Both arrangements mark changes in the Royal visit schedule. Originally only a 10-minute service stop was intended for Portage la Prairie.

"While Their Majesties drive into the city, the Royal train will travel on into Winnipeg and await them at the Canadian National Railways station.

PUBLIC NOT ADMITTED

"Members of the general public will not be admitted to the service at Portage la Prairie."

The Winnipeg Tribune said officials here and at Portage la Prairie would neither deny nor confirm the report that preparations are being made for a stop at Portage la Prairie. Officials, however, definitely denied the Royal party would drive to Winnipeg, the Tribune stated.

Last week Mayor John Queen asked Premier John Bracken of Manitoba to seek a visit by Their Majesties to Deer Lodge when the Royal train returned from its trip through western Canada. His request was made because veterans had expressed disappointment over the fact that a stop at the hospital had not been included in Their Majesties' itinerary when they visited Winnipeg May 24.

CALGARY, June 2.—All Directors of Anglo-Canadian Oil Company Ltd., were re-appointed at the annual general meeting held here this week. They include H. R. Milner, K.C., Edmonton; F. P. Byrne, K.C.; D. M. Baxter, Winnipeg; Walter S. Campbell, Edmonton; H. A. Howard, A. L. Smith, K.C., and A. J. Nesbitt of Montreal.

Baltic States Said By Diplomats to Hold Key to Pact

LONDON, June 2.—The Baltic states were said by diplomats on Thursday to hold the key to negotiations for a mutual assistance pact linking Russia with the Anglo-French anti-aggression bloc as the result of conditions laid down by the Soviet premier and Foreign Minister Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

Molotoff's insistence in a speech yesterday that these states—Finland, Esthonia, Lithuania and Latvia—be given specific guarantees against aggression was declared by a high British official as presenting "a difficult problem."

BRITAIN WILLING

Great Britain was represented as willing to give such guarantees, as she has to other Russian neighbors —Rumania and Poland—but the Baltic nations have indicated they want no direct ties with any bloc of powers.

In proposals sent to Moscow last Friday, Britain tried to get around this question by suggesting that Britain, France and Russia agree to aid any other European state if it asked help in repelling attack.

AMPLE GUARANTEES

The British view was that this clause gave ample guarantees to the Baltic states and at the same time caused no objections from them. Molotoff specifically rejected this proposal and said all Russia's European neighbors must be included in any guarantees.

British spokesmen explained that the British formula was aimed at aggression and it did not make any difference where it broke out, as long as it was in Europe.

OTHER PROBLEMS

British observers believed other problems to be cleared up were fairly simple. These include references in the proposals to the League of Nations covenant and the Russian desire for more concrete provisions for military consultations among the three powers.

Britain already has told Russia that the proposed pact would not be dependent on the league machinery and Moscow's misgivings were believed to have been removed.

UP TO RUSSIA

The next step rests with Russia, which has not yet sent a formal reply to the proposals.

British official sources said hopes of an eventual agreement with Russia were undiminished and took the view that Russian objections were to the form rather than to the content of the proposals.

Lake Chad, in central Africa, has an area of about 10,000 square miles during the dry season, and about 20,000 square miles during the rainy season.

Big Stylists Hail Queen as Good Dresser

New York Writer Traces Evolution of Queen's Clothes

By ADELAIDE KERR
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, June 2.—Across the Scottish moors there used to walk a sturdy pink-cheeked girl with wind-blown hair, wearing a comfortable sweater and tweed skirt.

Today, as Queen consort of the British King, she is touring Canada and will come to the United States June 8 to 12. She lives in the limelight of a throne and the clothes she wears feed the presses of a fashion conscious world. Between the two cycles of her life lie 20 years and a long and difficult sartorial battle.

For Elizabeth was not born a fashion plate. She is not a fashion plate now in the sense of devotedly following fashion's whims. But her clothes reflect distinction, are watched for fashion tips by every style-conscious person in the world.

As Duchess of York she became known for her graciousness, her kindliness and her smile. She made no claim to fame in her clothes. She appeared repeatedly in beige wool ensembles, combining a dress and coat (the dullest tailored) and showing relatively little change of cut. Most of them were furred at the neckline in a fluffy circlet of beige fox. Many of her hats fitted rolled suddenly back from her face.

Then came a day when the Duke of York became King and the woman who used to walk over Scottish moors stepped into the limelight as Queen. Her clothes became matters of first importance.

DIFFICULT PROBLEMS

As Queen she faced difficult fashion problems. The simple little black frocks which other women wear with such distinction were not for her. Trained in the tradition of Queen Mary, she had to choose clothes light and distinctive enough in color to make them stand out from the crowd.

Her evening clothes presented another problem, since they had to be of light color and fabric to serve as effective foils for the decorations and orders she must wear.

Moreover, she faced figure problems, as every woman does. Here's was shortness of stature, the fashion demands of her position had to be grafted on the demands of her silhouette.

Working with one of London's leading dressmakers, she took up the difficult problem and so began the development and evolution of the wardrobe of a Queen. Soft powder blues, lilacs, grays and dusty rose supplemented the beige she had worn so much before. Flounces and draped effects gave way to simple smart cuts.

Fluffy fox collars were pruned away to reveal that short, graceful curve of her throat, and the fur was placed on other parts of her costumes to retain the richness they demand.

Sharply rolled hat brims gave way to those which swept back with simple and grace, and jeweled clips supplemented her necklace of pearls.

QUEEN'S MODE

Gradually a new "Elizabethan mode" evolved, but not one costume sacrificed the personality of a woman who was feminine to the crown of her head.

Then came the royal visit to Paris in July, 1938, when the Queen captured even the fashion fancy of the French. Those spreading crinoline gowns she wore are credited with having launched that winter's mode of full skirted evening frocks and the frothy whiteness of her costumes with having inspired much of the vogue for the lingerie trims this spring.

Today on her first overseas tour her clothes are winning fashion applause. A slimmed figure has given an appearance of height; smart hats have added to her chic.

Her preference for pastel shades has had its effect on fashions in Canada, where many women have chosen gowns of dove gray, powder blue and lilac for state functions at which she appeared.

3 KILLED, 16 INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK

LONDON, June 2.—Three women were killed and about 16 persons injured when a London and North eastern railway train hit a truckload of straw and hurtled from its rails into a string of stationary freight cars near Hilgay Thursday.

Two of the dead were identified as Miss E. Snelling of London and Miss Winnifred Stinton of Greenway, Deringham, Norfolk. The third was not identified.

Eye witnesses said the three-car train, bound for Liverpool station, London, was travelling at 40 miles an hour when it struck the truck. The engine jumped the tracks.

The truck driver suffered a broken arm. The fireman, R. Miller, was seriously injured. The engineer, D. Barber, of Cambridge, escaped unharmed.

Handled Diamonds By Million Worh

KIMBERLEY, South Africa, June 2.—Chief Constable S. Roberts who handled $500,000,000 worth of diamonds in his service with the diamond detective branch is dead here. He retired in March after completing 27 years of service in the South African Police.

Detective Roberts was particularly well-known to diamond buyers whose imports and exports he supervised for the past 15 years.

Delegates To Annual Meet Back Britain

TORONTO, June 2—Delegates to the closing session of the 39th annual meeting of Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, on Thursday passed resolutions declaring their preparedness to defend their liberties and asking the Canadian government to stand behind Great Britain.

The resolutions were passed unanimously. A resolution, to be forwarded to the federal government, reads: "That we petition the government to stand firmly behind the motherland in case of national emergency."

EXERCISE FRANCHISE

Another resolution passed urged that the members of the order pledge themselves to "exercise their franchise in all municipal, provincial and federal elections."

Reporting for the film committee, Mrs. H. S. Angas of Toronto recommended that provincial chapters report to their provincial governments if the percentage of British and Canadian news is less than 50 per cent of the news reels showing in their provinces.

An invitation to hold the 1940 meeting in Saint John, N.B., was accepted.

Dinner Party Is Colorful Event of Annual Meeting Of Legion Auxiliary

SPIRIT of gay comradeship, so characteristic of the Canadian Legion, permeated the Jasper room of the Macdonald hotel on Thursday evening when members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Legion entertained at dinner. The banquet was arranged as the main social function of the Legion week, which is being held this week in the Memorial hall. Over 100 guests were in attendance, and honoring the affair with their presence were Mrs. John Campbell Bowen, Mrs. William Aberhart and Mrs. John W. Fry.

PRESIDING

Mrs. C. Faggetter, of Calgary, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, presided at dinner, and in a few after dinner remarks urged members to measure themselves and see if they were living up to the ideals of Canadian life, which their auxiliary stood for, patriotism, service, sacrifice and co-operation.

Mrs. Faggetter proposed a toast to Mrs. Bowen, who was later made the recipient of a lovely bouquet of carnations, presented to her by Mrs. R. Towns on behalf of the guests. In graciously thanking the auxiliary for the honor done her, Mrs. Bowen complimented them on their wonderful work, a work which didn't cease with the close of the war but has continued for their country.

TO THE LEGION

Toast to the Canadian Legion was proposed by Mrs. S. G. Pelley of Calgary, and Mrs. H. Laing responded.

Mrs. Aberhart proposed a toast to the Ladies' Auxiliary, to which Mrs. J. Burton of Innisfail responded.

Toast to the honored guests was proposed by Mrs. W. P. Graham, of Innisfail, and Mrs. Fry responded.

Miss Hazel Bunkall sang very sweetly during the evening accompanied on the piano by Miss Patricia Brown. Misas Brown also entertained with a piano solo.

Desert Song Plays Repeat Performance

Highly successful when produced toward the end of March, Sigmund Romberg's romantic, colorful operetta was repeated "by popular demand" at the Empire theatre, Thursday night by the Edmonton Civic Operetta Society. It will be performed again Friday and Saturday.

As was the case when first produced in March, the operetta went smoothly and the performance was highly polished throughout.

Under the baton of Mrs. J. B. Carmichael the principals, chorus and orchestra worked with cohesion and a unity of purpose that was most refreshing. The singing of the chorus was on a high level, while the work of the principals left little to be desired. Much praise goes to Mrs. Carmichael and all associated with her for the high standard of performance.

The production in March was extensively dealt with in these columns and little more comment is required. Visitors to the city should find this tuneful, romantic operetta an attraction well worth while for the week-end festivities.

Protest Is Voiced At N.C.W. Meet

HAMILTON, Ont., June 2—Protest against the export of war materials by the dominion, was voiced by the National Council of Women of Canada Thursday night, as session of the annual meeting continued here.

In a resolution sponsored by the Victoria Council of Women, Canada was urged either alone, or with other civilized nations, to take every possible step to stop the flow of war materials to aggressor nations, "whose actions are an outrage to the civilized world."

Delegates voted down a notice of motion submitted by Vancouver council, providing that the council's mental hygiene standing committee be withdrawn.

The Edmonton council filed a resolution asking that the notice of motion be tabled for further consideration. It was argued that mental hygiene committees across Canada had rendered outstanding service.

Royal Residence at Jasper Was Lovely 'Outlook Cabin'

JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., June 2.—Home of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth during their visit to Jasper National Park was Outlook Cabin of Jasper Park Lodge, one of the most completely equipped cabins known to the travelling public.

Located on a point of land jutting out into beautiful Lac Beauvert, it commands a magnificent view of the surrounding country, including the Whistler, Pyramid and Edith Cavell mountains.

SUSTAINED CABIN

Outlook cabin, although part of the lodge, is completely self-sustained, containing five bedrooms, two bedrooms for servants, kitchen, pantry, breakfast room, dining room and living room. The cabin is built of logs, peeled and varnished and contains many valuable antiques.

The entrance, which faces Lac Beauvert, is furnished with a specially built rattan suite with an imported oriental grass rug. Two old English foot wipers with the royal crest on each side are at both sides of the entrance.

The living room contains a large stone fireplace. The main window commands a perfect view of the Whistler mountains. The furniture is of the "Chippendale pattern" with unique wrought iron lighting fixtures.

IN DINING ROOM

With a large plate glass window framing Mount Pyramid, the dining room accommodates 12 persons. Wrought iron lighting fixtures add to the general effectiveness. The sideboard contains one of the finest collections of old pewter in Canada, and an open fireplace adds a homey touch.

The breakfast room is off the dining room and from its window is an arresting picture of Mount Edith Cavell. Sparkling Lac Beauvert is in the foreground.

The master bedroom, occupied by the King, is furnished in a blue color scheme with draperies and carpet of old fashioned handicraft, wrought iron lighting fixtures and antique parchment.

The Queen's bedroom is finished in a pink color scheme with matching carpet, spreads and draperies. A special telephone of gold and pink enamel is on the bed table. There is a special dressing room of the same color scheme.

Incubator Is Manufactured In Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, June 2—A Pittsburgh public health supervisor has designed an incubator for prematurely-born babies so simple that high school boys can build it and so compact and light that nurses can carry it into the home.

Mrs. Katherine Holcome created a wooden incubator heated by light bulbs. Her son Jack, a high school boy, helped. The design was completed and Jack's classmates in the high school wood shop put on the finishing touches. At least 18 babies, weighing less than five pounds at birth, have already breathed their way to life in the boxes.

Dorothy Dix Says:

One of the great tragedies of marriage is that when most husbands and wives come to middle age and their children have left them to go about the business of life for themselves, they find that they are not even close friends. They are strangers who have merely a speaking acquaintance with each other.

The husband has no more knowledge of what his wife really thinks and feels, of what her secret hopes and desires are than he has of any woman he casually meets. He finds that it is harder to keep up a conversation with her than it is with a woman at his right or left at a dinner party. He doesn't know most of her women friends by sight, and he has no idea of how she spends her time, or how she has developed in the twenty-five or thirty years in which they have dwelt under the same roof.

The wife, on her part, is equally unacquainted with her husband. It has been so long since he was anything but Papa to her and the good provider who kept the family soft and comfortable that she has forgotten that she was ever romantically in love with him. All she sees in him now is a fat man, growing bald, who lives in a world of business of which she knows as little as she does of the heart of darkest Africa, and who has strange and incomprehensible personal peculiarities that she calls John's "ways" and doesn't even try to understand.

The result is that these two bore each other to extinction. Every bridal couple should lay this to heart. They should deliberately begin during their honeymoon to cultivate companionship. They should work and play together. Read together. Develop the same tastes and habits. Make themselves necessary to each other. For in that way alone can they keep close to each other. Conjugal love is not a miracle flame that feeds itself. It is fire on the altar that burns only so long as you stoke it. DOROTHY DIX.

Novelty Quick Rolls Will Impress Family

A basket of these quick hot roll-ups will banish all thoughts of unpleasantly hot weather. Serve them with curls of butter and new honey.

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Impress yourself and your family with a batch of novelty quick rolls. A surprse often brightens the summer appetite.

QUICK HOT ROLL-UPS
(1 dozen)

Two cups sifted flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup shortening, ½ cup grated nippy cheese, 2-3 to ¾ cup milk.

Sift flour baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add cheese. Add milk to form a soft dough. Turn out on board. Knead lightly for 30 seconds. Divide dough into two equal portions. Roll out each portion to a circular sheet ¼ inch thick. Cut into pie-shaped pieces. Roll each piece from large end to point. Seal point. Three eggs, separated, 1 cup of sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1¼ cups bread crumbs, 1 cup chopped nuts, 3 tablespoons water, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract.

Separate eggs. Beat whites until stiff. Add ¼ cup sugar, beating it in to form a meringue. Beat egg yolks until thick. Add remaining sugar gradually, alternating with the water to make a fluffy mixture. Add vanilla. Combine nuts, crumbs and baking powder and add to yolk mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Minute Make-Ups

A charming young person from Hollywood gives us a good practical recipe for hand lotion. Mix equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor, to which you add a good dash of fresh lemon juice. The lemon has a slightly bleaching effect, while the glycerin softens the skin.

Raising A Family

Lily Smith is ten or eleven years old. One day she comes in and asks her mother for a dime. Her mother gives it to her and Lily says, "You couldn't make it a quarter, could you, Mud?"

No, Mud couldn't. And so Lily says, "Why are we so poor? We never have a cent. You always have an empty pocketbook and so does Dad."

O. R. Barton

"We are not so poor, my dear. You just don't see the money we spend. That's all. I pay everything by cheque and so does your father. We use very little change. Charge accounts may seem to you like some good fairy that gives things away for the asking, but they mean cash, real money at the end of the month."

"I never see any money. If I saw a five-dollar bill in your bag, I'd not believe it."

So that sets her mother to thinking. "It is time that this child learned to handle money," she says to herself.

Next day, she is going to ask Dave to give her the cash in hand. She will hold it, carry it in her bag, and let Lily see it while they go around to pay bills.

REASON WHY BRIDES FAIL

Whether or not Mrs. Smith carried out her plan, her idea was splendid. There are too many children who know nothing about the silent transactions of cheques.

That was experience that Lily had lacked. Or, if she had seen the actual cash being spent, she probably had never had any handling of the money itself.

She should have been permitted to do some of the buying. She should have learned that money in the house was not surplus gravy; that most luxuries have to come last. She had somehow absorbed the idea that cash in hand meant something to be spent entirely on the person who owned it.

This is one reason why many young brides fail at first. They do not know that when in doubt between hamburger or lipstick, it is food that means trumps. John needs feeding first, or he may fail to notice that brand new shade of carmine.

According To Culbertson

In many situations, one defender is in a far better position than the other to count the declarer's original suit holdings and thereby determine the best defense. For example, in today's hand, West had to guess what suit to play at a certain point, whereas, had he left the decision to East, the latter would have been in no doubt.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	2 clubs
2 diamonds	2 hearts	3 diamonds	3 hearts
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Undoubtedly East would have been delighted to play against a no trump contract, but probably felt that North's one no trump would be taken out by South. Hence he preferred to mention his club suit while the bidding was low enough to make such action safe.

West opened the nine of clubs. After winning with the ace, declarer considered the advisability of leading hearts, to avoid dummy of that suit in order to ruff a third round. But this manoeuvre, declarer realized, would involve distinct risk. There were nine diamonds in sight, and it was very likely that the outstanding four were divided 3-1, rather than 2-2. If declarer surrendered the lead before drawing trumps, the defenders might well get in one or two diamond ruffs. If, on the other hand, trumps were drawn and the diamond ace then were knocked out, the defenders might easily make a mistake and attempt to cash a second club trick. If they did, declarer would be able to handle the situation nicely by ruffing and discarding one of his hearts on dummy's fifth diamond.

After considerable thought, declarer decided that the second plan offered the better chance and, as will be seen, he was right.

Three rounds of trumps were drawn and then the diamond king was laid down. West won and, not knowing that East had started with six clubs, returned a club. Declarer gleefully ruffed and ran the diamond suit, discarding one of his hearts, thereby fulfilling the contract.

West had attempted to guess something that he was not in a position to determine. There was no way for him to know whether East had started with five or six clubs. Obviously, with a long diamond available in dummy, it would be fatal to return a club if the declarer could ruff. In that case the defender's only chance would be to grab three heart tricks. In any event, the contract could not be set unless at least two heart tricks were available. That being so after winning with the diamond ace, West should have grasped the opportunity to lead, not another club, but the three of harts. Note the specific inference that this would have carried to East and how easy it would have been for the latter to have conducted the defense from that point. On winning with the heart ace East would know that West originally had held only five hearts, since his three spot was obviously the fourth highest and he could have only the deuce under it. Thus East would not have made the futile effort to cash the second club trick, but would have confined his attention to the heart suit, continuing with the queen and a low heart.

The reasoning involved in this suggested defense may be a bit abstruse, but I earnestly commend it to readers' attention as being the sort of thinking that produces the best results.

Let Body Relax Into Calm Restful Sleep

By ALICIA HART

Many a beauty-minded woman has cured insomnia simply by doing relaxing exercises each night before even trying to go to sleep. Just as stretching exercises are fine things with which to begin a day, relaxing routines help to end it on a note of peace and quiet which is sleep-producing.

Begin relaxing exercises which will lull you off to sleep rather quickly the same way you start eye-opening morning exercises—with a couple of good stretches. Then lie flat on your back with arms at sides. You are now ready to begin to try to relax every muscle in your body.

First raise one leg up and away from the bed, tensing the muscles of it as you do so. Hold it up meanwhile keeping muscles tense for five or six seconds, then relax it completely and let it fall back on the bed again. Raise the other leg and repeat the routine, tensing the muscles, holding the leg up for a few seconds, relaxing it and letting it fall.

Repeat with arms. Then with hand. Lift your head off the pillow tensing neck and shoulder muscles hold the position several seconds relax muscles and let head fall. Lift centre of backbone up and away from the bed, then lower slowly. As you lower backbone, make believe that you are going to sink down into the mattress.

RESTFUL VISIONS ARE HELPFUL

Afterwards, get into comfortable sleeping position and think of huge waves rolling in toward shore. Or of yards of soft, silky black velvet hanging on a line, rippling in a gentle breeze.

Anyway, think of something pleasant or at least restful—not of tomorrow's duties or troubles. You will be better able to face them if you get a good night's sleep beforehand.

Dr. Townsend Fidgets In Gallery as House Boots Out Pension Bill

WASHINGTON, June 2. — The house of representatives booted the Townsend old age pension bill out of the window Thursday by a 302 to 97 vote while its parent, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, fidgeted in his gallery seat.

The roll call, generally conceded to be an effort by the Democratic leadership to put Republicans on the spot, placed 55 members of the minority party on record for the bill. In addition, one Republican was "paired" for the measure—meaning that he would have voted for the legislation had he not been paired off with one of its opponents.

Republicans against the bill totalled 100.

The Democratic majority split 40 for and 194 against.

The measure would have provided pensions up to $200 a month for persons 60 years old and over. These pensions would have been financed by a tax on business transactions ranging from one-half of one per cent to two per cent.

Others in the Royal party were in surrounding cabins.

Thursday afternoon, before starting on their trip to Mount Edith Cavell, Their Majesties were given thousands of feet of film they have taken since they left England. It was developed by the Dominion Motion Picture Bureau.

Officials of the bureau had a problem on their hands to find enough film to satisfy the demands of the King, who uses hundreds of feet a day. However, by borrowing from newspaper photographers and others, the Bureau chief, Capt. Frank Badgley, was able to keep His Majesty stocked.

On arrival at the Jasper Park station, three miles from the lodge, the King and Queen were met by Hon. James A. MacKinnon, minister without portfolio, who welcomed them back into the province. Mr. MacKinnon acted as the province's representative of the Dominion government.

Welcome to the park was extended by J. A. Wood, parks superintendent, at an informal gathering at the station. Mr. Wood and Mrs. Wood were presented to Their Majesties on arrival of the Royal train.

SUN APPEARS

The first part of the day was dull and the temperature was 50 degrees, just right for walking. In mid-afternoon the sun made an appearance just as Their Majesties were starting for the glacier.

On the Queen's arrival at the Royal cabin, Robert Summerville, manager of the lodge, took them through the building. The Royal quarters normally rent at something more than $100 a day.

The Queen was much impressed with the fact that she and the King would be alone in the cabin and not have hotel service. She asked about arrangements for keeping food warm.

LITTLE LUGGAGE

Emphasizing the informality of the stay here, Their Majesties brought few pieces of luggage from the train to the lodge. The Queen planned to wear a sports dress down in the evening, necessitating little personal attention on her maid Bessie Hardwick, who accompanied the Royal party.

Scenic vistas during the day. Their Majesties expressed their appreciation of the setting of Alpine loveliness in the lodge vicinity. A delightful spot to become an integral part of the magnificent setting on Lac Beauvert on which they are placed.

From their windows Their Majesties looked out over the broad valley of the Athabasca, surrounded by towering snow-capped mountain peaks rising to more than 10,000 feet altitude. Jasper itself is 3,200 feet above sea level.

In the blue-green water of the lake Their Majesties saw mirrored Rene Hommeme, Tete Jaune Mt., of the Rockies, a peak of which resembles the face of a man.

They've hung a mirror in the cloakroom of the British House of Commons, but Lady Astor, Canada's woman member, doesn't get a chance to duck votes with the old painted-powder dodge.

Fish Charmed By Bagpipes

SYDNEY, N.S.W., June 2.—Tom Mackay, drum major of the Highland Pipe Band, claims to be able to charm fish with his bagpipes.

He reported members of his band caught 20 fish in 30 minutes while he played Maids of Kintail, although they had been unable to catch anything while his pipes were silent.

At Jasper

they saw mule deer and a mother bear and her cub.

Last night they walked from their lodge to see beavers which have built a dam nearby.

WORE HEAVY CLOTHES

Both the King and the Queen wore heavy clothes for their trip to Glacier of the Angels. Her Majesty wore dark glasses to protect her eyes from the glare of the ice.

The Royal party might have been perhaps than they ever have been in their lives, spent the evening in their luxurious cabin after having dinner with members of their staff. Their cabin has accommodation for only the King and Queen and their two personal attendants.

Their Majesties came to Jasper National park untired by their 6,000 miles of travel in the Dominion. Soon after their arrival they motored 23 miles to Maligne Canyon and walked for half an hour admiring wild flowers and animals they saw.

The motor drive to Glacier of the Angels and Mount Edith Cavell came in the afternoon after Their Majesties had seen the motion pictures they have taken so far on their tour.

During the morning walk the King and Queen were delighted to encounter a mother bear and cub and spent several minutes photographing it.

PEEPED AROUND TREE

The cub, shy, peeped around a tree at the King and Queen and then stampeded up and down the trunk looking much like a little black ball of fur.

The mother bear stood guard at the base of the tree and the Royal party kept a safe distance away from the animals who are rather tame.

Their Majesties were amused by the antics of the cub who seemed to think it was a game of hide-and-seek.

Wild flowers growing in the canyon drew the attention of the Queen who gathered a bunch for herself.

PHOTOGRAPH DEER

On their way up the canyon the Royal couple peered about for animals but saw none until they started back. A mule deer came close to the car and the King leveled his movie camera at the animal.

The Queen wore a light blue-grey woolen suit with grey suede shoes and a brighter blue sheer-crowned hatchet, much like those worn by swimming race queens in the southern Alberta around her home. The King wore a tweed jacket, grey flannels and a soft felt hat.

Their Majesties' stay in Jasper was very informal and the absence of guards around "Outlook Cabin" where they were lodged was noticeable. Any of the guests at the lodge could approach the Royal cabin within a few feet but they respected Their Majesties' wishes to be left alone.

TWO ATTENDANTS

Only two attendants lived with Their Majesties in the cabin—T. L. Jerram, the King's valet, and Miss C. Maclean, the Queen's maid.

Their Majesties on Way to Jasper Lodge For a Day of Relaxation

Their Majesties are shown here just after they stepped from the Royal train at Jasper on Thursday. They spent a whole day at Jasper Park Lodge, relaxing in the mountain resort from their strenuous cross-Canada journey. Snow-fall high in the mountains, which did not reach the valley, added to the pleasure of the scenic view.

districts into Calgary and then through the foothills into Banff National Park.

Then they left Alberta for their visit to the Pacific coast. On Thursday they were back on this province on their return journey east, and today they make their long-awaited visit to Alberta's capital.

Final touches were put to decorations yesterday in the city, yesterday. Business buildings were draped with more bunting and new flags were hung out. Jasper avenue is a blaze of color with its crowns, shields, bunting, flags and pennants.

ALL IN READINESS

Railway and bus service officials reported all in readiness to handle the incoming thousands due to arrive this morning and some special trains are already arrived in the city are keeping the staff at the accommodation bureau busy.

Indians who will be encamped at a site along the procession route arrived Thursday. First of the tepees was erected and the native village soon took shape. Approximately 1,200 Indians, all in native regalia, will make up the encampment.

A survey showed the biggest array of transportation facilities in Edmonton's history will handle the crowds that come into the city. Twenty-five trains—17 of them being operated as specials—and 56 buses will bring the visitors from all directions.

Then Majesties arrived from Jasper National Park at 3:30 p.m., M.S.T., they will be met at Edmonton by a new tonight at 10 p.m. to ride the royal train to Saskatoon where they will have been welcomed, feted and dined.

Every street standard along the 12-mile procession route Their Majesties will follow has been decorated. Every building is dressed gaily. Pennants and flags have been strung across streets.

The holiday mood struck the city early in the week. It gained momentum after Mayor Majesty left the Pacific coast cities and headed back across Canada over the northern route. With the royal couple back in Alberta, holiday spirit is at fever pitch.

21-GUN SALUTE

A 21-gun salute will herald the arrival of the royal train in the city and the welcoming party at the station will include Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen and Mrs. Bowen, Premier Aberhart and Mrs. Aberhart, Mayor J. W. Fry and Mrs. Fry, and Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, M.P., and Mrs. MacKinnon.

The royal route will take Their Majesties over Edmonton's wide streets down famed Portage trail, an Indian encampment to Blatchford Field, civic airport, through the business section and across the half-mile high level bridge over the North Saskatchewan River.

Civic ceremonies will take place during the one-hour stop at the legislative buildings, entered through a big white arch with "Welcome" in block letters. On the steps, Premier Aberhart will read the province's address of welcome and Mayor Fry will extend civic greetings. Seven Victoria Cross holders will be presented.

Walking on a red carpet up the steps and into the buildings past a flower-decked fountain, Their Majesties will enter the legislative assembly chambers. In the newly-carpeted and redecorated chambers, approximately 175 persons will be presented to Their Majesties. On one side of the chambers hangs new portraits of the King and Queen.

TENDER DINNER

In the evening the Social Credit government will tender a dinner with Premier Aberhart and Mrs. Aberhart as host and hostess. Approximately 175 guests will be in attendance and beautiful gold dinner service will be used for those at the head table.

Leaving the hotel after the dinner, Their Majesties will go the station where, for a second time, they again will board the train. Boarding the train Their Majesties will leave for Saskatoon and spend the night at a secret siding along the way.

Trains Bring 25,000 To Edmonton Friday

Special trains into Edmonton over the Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and Northern Alberta lines poured visitors by the thousand onto Edmonton's streets Friday to greet Their Majesties.

It is estimated that more than 25,000 people travelled over the railways to Edmonton over the three lines from all parts of Alberta. Both trans-Canada lines carried approximately 12,500 passengers in 18 special trains, while the Northern Alberta Railways in three specials, brought more than 1,000 loyal subjects from northern Alberta.

From an early hour visitors thronged from the rail depots to Edmonton's streets and started making a tour of the city to view the decorations. No concession was overlooked at the restaurants or on the streets.

OTHER VEHICLES

By bus, motor car, truck and even the aged buggy celebrants flocked to pay homage to Their Majesties a constant stream of vehicles lining the highway approaches to Edmonton throughout the early morning.

The greatest crowd in Edmonton's history will view the Royal Progress through Edmonton.

200 Highlanders Are Here From Calgary

Detachment of 200 Calgary Highlanders arrived here on Friday to participate in the Royal Visit celebrations. The detachment came at the expense of the men themselves. Accompanied by the skirl of pipes, they marched down Jasper from the C.P.R. station with an admiring throng looking on.

They will help in lining the route of the Royal procession and are expected to return south Friday night.

PEOPLE FLYING FROM NORTH TO SEE MAJESTIES

Airplanes of four commercial companies operating out of Edmonton were rushing passengers to Edmonton Friday in order to get them here in time to see Their Majesties as they proceed through the gaily decorated streets, lined with cheering citizens and children.

INDIANS PRESENT COLORFUL SIGHT FOR ROYAL VISIT

Resplendent in feathered headdresses, beaded jackets and moccasins, some 1,200 Indians from northern Alberta reserves, will form one of the most colorful and interesting spectacles during the Royal Visit here Friday.

Early Friday morning more than 200 Crees from the reserves at Hobbema and Winterburn were gathered at the Indian encampment at the west end of Portage Avenue and every minute Indians were arriving from widely scattered northern Alberta reserves. Crees from Hobbema, Winterburn, Wabamun, Lac Ste. Anne, Saddle Lake, Cold Lake and Good Fish Lake were present, while a few Stony Indians and a small group of Yellow Faces from Rocky Mountain House were also present. The greater number of the Indians arrived shortly before 11 a.m.

Four colorfully decorated teepees form the main centre of attraction at the encampment. Inside the teepee of Chief Joe Samson of the Hobbema reserve, there was feverish activity as squaws and braves worked to decorate their home in Royal style. Beautifully beaded belts and jackets that take more than three weeks' work to make and long, trailing headdresses of eagle feathers were scattered about. G. C. Haigh, Indian agent of the Winterburn reserve is in charge of the encampment.

MEDAL IS GIVEN FOR HAIG STATUE

LONDON, June 2.—Alfred F. Hardiman, sculptor of the Haig memorial statue in Whitehall, has been awarded a medal by the Royal Society of British Sculptors for "the best work of the year by a British sculptor publicly exhibited in London." The design of the statue aroused great controversy. Horse-lovers and artists formed opposing camps. Lady Haig, widow of the Great War field marshal, refused to attend the unveiling ceremony in 1937.

United Church Urged To Become Religious Marriage Conscious

LONDON, June 2.—Urging the United church become "religious marriage conscious," in Canada, "which now faces disruption of family life," Rev. Dr. Hugh Dobson of Vancouver last night told the London conference "that wherever captures the family captures civilization and churches of today must direct their attention towards the family and preserve religion.

Associate secretary of the general board of social service and evangelism, Dr. Dobson warned that civilization has never been determined by triumphant states but by families of defeated nations.

Dr. Dobson's remarks followed a debate on a resolution that sought to have the privileges of civil marriages extended. The church court divided yesterday and eventually referred the matter back to the social service committee.

Before delivering his address on "Family Life and Democracy," Dr. Dobson thanked the "east" for its generosity to the "west."

SASKATOON IS ALL SET FOR ROYAL VISIT

Will Greet King and Queen on Arrival Saturday

SASKATOON, June 2.—Saskatoon today was putting finishing touches to the decorations which will greet King George and Queen Elizabeth when they return to Saskatchewan on Saturday.

In ultra-glorious green finery as the result of recent showers, the city was gaily-bedecked with flags of the Empire and was preparing a special decoration scheme on Broadway Bridge in memorial of His Majesty's father, King George V, whose birthday, June 3, coincides with the visit of the present monarch.

Memorial colors will greet the King and Queen as their automobile carries them over the majestic bridge, constructed only seven years ago, to the University of Saskatchewan campus, resplendent in its summer finery.

CROWD OF 100,000

When the Royal train arrives here at 2 p.m. M.S.T. after brief halts at Unity and Biggar, the King and Queen will be welcomed by an estimated 100,000 including many from the southern districts where heavy rainfall rendered impossible any trip to Regina on May 25.

From northern reserves, relatives of Poundmaker, most famous of all Indian chieftains, will shout their greetings to their "white father" while from the foreign-settlements of northern Saskatchewan thousands of British-born children will join the message of loyalty which will acclaim the king.

BLEACHERS ERECTED

Bleachers have been erected in many parts of Saskatoon and seats are now available at $1 and $1.50, after choice locations had been sold for $3 a seat. Hotelkeepers said they had practically no rooms available now and that by Friday night every room would be occupied. Thousands of youngsters will be encamped at the exhibition grounds and at the motor camp.

The King and Queen will spend two hours here and after being greeted by Lieutenant Governor A. P. McNab of Saskatchewan, and by

Aim To Develop Ontario Lignite Coal Deposits

TORONTO, June 2 — Premier Mitchell Hepburn told a delegation Thursday the Ontario government is considering means of developing lignite coal deposits in northern Ontario and the possible investment of millions of dollars in the project.

"Before we get through there may have been billions of dollars of public funds invested," he added.

LEGION ASKS 50 PER CENT. PUBLIC WORK

Convention Seeks Retirement Married Women In Civil Service

To encourage employment of ex-servicemen, the Dominion and provincial governments will be asked by the Canadian Legion to include a clause in all government contracts that 50 per cent. of workmen employed on public works be ex-service men. This resolution was unanimously passed at the provincial command convention Thursday.

The convention will also seek the retirement of all married women employed by provincial and federal governments where their husbands are able to provide for them, and that ex-servicemen be given these positions.

FREE TREATMENT

The convention will also recommend to the federal government that free treatment should be given in all municipal hospitals and that all ex-servicemen, regardless of circumstances, should be given free medical and hospital treatment immediately the necessity arises, with necessary transportation provided. At present treatment is given in only designated hospitals, and applies only to ex-servicemen in straightened circumstances. The patients have also to pay their own transpoftation to the nearest designated hospital.

Free treatment for all ex-servicemen whose ailments can be benefited by treatment at Miette Hot Springs was advocated also.

The convention also asked that where men have been confined in department hospitals for treatment that a case history of that treatment be sent to the patient's local doctor in the event the patient consult's him further regarding his health.

Five resolutions dealing with the civil service were dealt with by the convention. One was that bilingual qualifications be not considered requisite for such positions as cleaners, caretakers and similar positions, the duties of which do not require contact with the public.

The Legion urged on all political parties to agree upon some just regulations which would eliminate the possibilities of injustice being done to civil servants charged with partisan activities. The delegates condemned the practice of dismissing public servants for alleged partisan activity under which no specific charges are made and investigation and hearing is difficult of attainment and indeed may be denied.

Support of the merit system of appointment will be urged upon all political parties, and particularly that steps be taken to insure that qualified ex-servicemen applicants receive the statutory preference to which they are entitled, regardless of political affiliations.

SUPERANNUATION

Retirement of civil servants at 60 years of age instead of the present retirement age of 65 years will be sought, also that ex-servicemen who have completed 25 years in the service, retire voluntarily and that service in the Great War be accepted when computing length of service for superannuation.

Restoration of dollar-for-dollar bonus on payment of interest and principal made by Soldier Settlers will be sought, and also that the government take immediate steps to cancel all interest arrears on Soldier Settlement Board loans and that future interest following the adjustment be at the rate of two per cent.

There will be no session of the convention on Friday, but delegates will attend at the Memorial hall for the grand parade in connection with the visit of Their Majesties. At night the delegates will attend a banquet and dance at the Memorial hall.

WARNING ISSUED GUARD AGAINST HOUSE PROWLERS

Last minute warning to Edmontonians to take every precaution to guard against loss by house prowlers was issued by Chief of Police A. G. Shute Friday.

He suggests that all doors and windows be securely locked, because this will discourage prowlers and will enable people to tell immediately on their return if their homes have been entered in their absence.

He advises that full descriptions of all articles of value which are left in the homes be taken by the owners so that they can give that information to the police if the articles are stolen. He warned against leaving money in the homes.

He also warned against pickpockets and advised every person to beware of all strangers.

He also requests that the police be notified immediately anyone discovers anything wrong. This will permit the police to get on the trail while the clues are still fresh.

"The co-operation of the public is earnestly requested in their own interests. Especially would I ask them to observe all police orders and regulations and to exercise extreme care when walking or driving on the streets and highways. We do not want any accidents which would mar the visit of Their Majesties," the chief stated.

Day Brilliant On Morning Of Royalty Visit

Friday morning, Edmonton's greatest day in history dawned brilliantly. Save for a few thin clouds resting over the southern horizon, skies were clear allowing the beaming morning sun free play. Slight breezes playing over the city did little more than faintly stir the hundreds of flags and buntings draped over the town.

Forecast from Toronto indicated mostly fair weather with stationery or a little higher temperatures for Friday and Saturday.

Local temperatures climbed to a high of 58 above Thursday afternoon then sank to an overnight low of 31 above to give the city the second June frost of the year in two consecutive days. Temperature at 9 a.m. was 53 above.

Roads in all sections of northern and central Alberta, early dotted with hundreds of cars bearing Edmonton visitors by the thousands were reported by Alberta Motor Association officials to be in near-perfect condition.

Near northern weather Friday morning was mostly clear and calm with temperatures ranging from 46 to 55 above. No rain had fallen during the past twenty-four hours.

To Lead Progress

Riding new cream colored motorcycles, Constables Ernest Foster and Robert Hughes of the city police force will pilot the Royal procession along the route of Royal progress. Constable J. S. Mansfield will be in charge of 30 members of motorcycle clubs who will be used as special police.

Horse Injures Man

Sustaining severe head injuries when he was kicked by a horse shortly after noon Thursday while working for Julius Dreger in South Edmonton, Edward Tebantz, 26 who lives just south of the city, was brought to the General hospital for medical aid. His condition is serious.

BILLY FOSTER IN SERIOUS STATE AFTER ACCIDENT

Condition of Billy Foster, of 10714 126 street, who was seriously injured when his motorcycle got out of control and he was hurled against a fence at the race track at the Exhibition grounds during a motorcycle race Thursday evening, was reported as still serious Friday morning.

Unconscious when he was picked up, he was rushed to the Royal Alexandra hospital in a Jack Hays' ambulance, and recovered semi-consciousness on his way. He suffered severe head injuries and was badly shocked and shaken. About 20 years of age, he has ridden motorcycles for three years, but the machine on which he crashed was purchased only two weeks ago.

CULTURAL EXHIBITS

The difference between the amusements and the cultural exhibits at the Fair is that the cultural exhibits are very amusing.

A word to the wise is sufficient. For that matter, "sufficient" is also a word to the foolish.

The mind should be well cultivated through education, even though it is an extremely harrowing experience.

White House Set So Royal Guests Can Relax a Bit

Mrs. Roosevelt and Her Aides Ready to Entertain King and Queen in Way They Will Feel at Home.

By NIGRID ARNE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 2.—When King George and Queen Elizabeth finally step into the White House elevator to go up to bed after their first day in Washington, June 8, they will discover some of the ways Mrs. Roosevelt has for turning the executive mansion into a home.

It will be around midnight. Dinner is scheduled for 7:30. The royal visitors will talk to hundreds of persons, will be on their feet quite a bit, will listen to a great deal of talk, and will hear some chamber music.

They will be escorted down the spacious hall by Mrs. Roosevelt who will ask them when they like breakfast. They can have breakfast in bed, they can join Mrs. Roosevelt in the big sunny upstairs living room full of books, flowers and family pictures, or they can go down in the walnut-panelled family dining room. They can have whatever they want, whether it's poached eggs or kippered herring.

After good-nights, the King and Queen will step into quiet, homelike rooms. The lamp on the bedside stand will be lighted. Another lamp will be aglow beside the chaise-longue that is flanked by a stand holding the latest books and magazines. There will be White House stationery on the desk. The beds will be turned down and on the night stand there will be a vacuum jug of water and a bowl of fruit.

MAYBE MIDNIGHT SNACK

Downstairs a maid and a valet will be waiting near the house telephone just in case there's something else the visitors want—a glass of warm milk, perhaps, or something more substantial than fruit. The White House icebox (remember those big Roosevelt sons) is proof against any midnight demands.

All those preparations are amenities Mrs. Roosevelt has observed wherever she has lived. They're made for all her guests, for some young unknown she is befriending as well as for a visiting King and Queen.

The royal guests will find, probably gratefully, that the White House beds really were designed to rest weary bones. The pillows are down-filled. There's always an extra blanket around. Periodically, Mrs. Roosevelt checks the eight guest rooms on the second floor and the three on the third for such details.

Such matters as buttons, rips and pressing of clothes are tended to by the White House staff. But for shaves, shines, haircuts and waves guests generally must either go out or call an operator to the White House. That probably won't happen with the King and Queen since they have their own staff along.

At breakfast, Mrs. Roosevelt will tell her guests the hours for luncheon and dinner. The time varies according to the day's program.

DISCREET HOSTESS

By discreet questioning, Mrs. Roosevelt usually learns if one of her guests is on a diet or has a special dislike for particular food. White House menus are American, and usually only food in season is served.

But the housekeeper, Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, has made a long study of food frills—sauces with foreign flavoring, flaky pastries and light desserts. The final rule about the food is that simple one which so often is violated: If it's hot food it must be hot; if it's cold food, it must be chilled.

Washington used to be full of stories about lukewarm White House chicken and melted White House ice cream. But Mrs. Roosevelt changed that by installing steam cabinets and ice cabinets to bring food the longish trek from the kitchen downstairs to the dining room.

ROOSEVELT HELPERS

Housekeeper Nesbitt is sunny-natured, a Hyde Park townswife whose whole wheat bread attracted the Roosevelts. So they took her along to run the house at Albany and then at Washington.

She will work out the meals the King and Queen will eat, even timing the arrival from the markets of every chicken and stalk of celery. The night of the state dinner she will stand silently at the serving dish as it starts upstairs. Then she will slip into a formal satin and mingle with the guests, a sharp eye on the service. It will be on her head if a nervous waiter dumps an artichoke in the Queen's lap.

There are other important assistants in official Washington's entertainment of the King and Queen. For instance the young ceremonial officer for the U.S. department of state—H. Charles Spruks—slim, gracious and handsome. He is the one who decides who sits where, what the band plays when, who rides on what auto and who is introduced and how. But Mrs. Roosevelt, a boy who graduated from Syracuse and went overseas with the A.E.F., took a turn at the lumber business and then became a diplomat.

OF SECRET SERVICE

There is the handsome, lacrium Col. (Gentlucky) brandy Edward Starling, chief of the White House secret service, who must see that the visitors are safe. He looks like the story-book senator, but he started life chasing bank robbers so well that President Theodore Roosevelt (1901-1909) "borrowed" him for the White House. He is a diplomatic

The King and Queen are photographed here as they stepped into their automobile at Jasper, to be driven to Jasper Park Lodge. The high peaks of the Rockies are seen in the background, behind the Royal train. The gardens at the Lodge and the scenic beauty of the park drew enthusiastic praise from Their Majesties.

Germany Begins to Cultivate Balkans as Yugoslav Prince Feted

BERLIN, June 2—Germany enthusiastically began cultivating the Balkans last night, lavishing hospitality on Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia. The questions of the free city of Danzig and alleged "encirclement" were left to simmer.

The pictorial measures taken welcoming the prince and Princess Olga on their two-day visit, just provided a clear indication of its importance. Spring attaches to Yugoslavia in the matter of the powers for position and prestige in many western Europe.

Chancellor Hitler appeared at the railroad station to greet the visitors. He was flanked by Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Frau Goering. Airplanes zoomed overhead.

All stores closed as a SCHOOL HOLIDAY

School children were given a day's holiday. Thousands lined up in the streets for hours to see the finelooking Yugoslavian regent as he drove from the station to Bellevue castle which Hitler had refurnished elaborately for foreign guests.

While the speech yesterday by Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Russian foreign commissar was treated officially with some caution, informed Nazis hailed it happily as a blow to what they charged are Anglo-French efforts to "encircle" Germany.

Dec Angriff, the newspaper of Propaganda Paul Goebbels, described Molotoff's rejection of the British formula for bringing Moscow into the Anglo-French anti-aggression bloc as a "frosty wind out of Moscow."

REFUGEE SHIP STILL IN PORT DESPITE ORDER

German Liner Unable To Get Ready To Sail

HAVANA, Cuba, June 2—The German liner St. Louis remained in port last night despite an order by President Federico Laredo Bru to leave immediately with her 917 Jewish refugees to be towed from Cuban waters by a Cuban warship. The refugees were denied permission to land in Cuba.

The president signed a decree directing that the ship depart "within this day" and Cuban marines were held in readiness for any emergency, but last night it was announced the liner could not get ready to sail until Saturday.

It was believed the St. Louis would sail at 10 a.m. today. The ship arrived here last Saturday.

Reports in Washington stated American representatives of Jewish relief organizations in New York understood the Cuban government would permit all refugees to land who have valid landing permits and whose relatives or friends either in Cuba or the United States guarantee a $500 bond for each refugee.

Police kept close watch on the passengers, who included 500 women and 100 children. Guards leaning the ship said women and children could leave the ship continuously and that calls to meals for the most part were unanswered.

Port police had several boats ready to escort the St. Louis from the harbor to sea on any of the occasions who might jump overboard. One passenger slashed his wrists and jumped overboard Wednesday. The man was rescued.

FRAUD FINDING IS REQUESTED BY COL. DREW

Suggests To Committee That Contract Should Be Cancelled

OTTAWA, June 2—Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, Thursday asked the Commons public accounts committee investigating the Hyde gun contract to return a finding that there was fraud in obtaining the contract and that it therefore should be cancelled.

"Fraud by whom?" asked Gerald McGeer (Lib., Vancouver-Burrard), who was examining Col. Drew.

"By Hahn, Major J. F. Hahn, president of the John Inglis Company, Limited, Toronto, which holds the contract," replied Col. Drew.

"Then here for me ask us to find him guilty of fraud?"

To effect you. If anyone else is responsible for the misleading statements and fraud he is equally guilty."

FRAUD ALLEGATION

Col. Drew's fraud allegation was based on his charge that Major Hahn in negotiations with the British War Offices and the Canadian defence department had represented the gun company as a going concern when in reality it had suspended operations because of bankruptcy.

"Have they failed to carry out their contracts?" demanded Mr. McGeer.

Major Hahn boldly took the credit for persuading the governments of Canada and the United Kingdom to award the gun contracts, said Mr. McGeer.

PUT MEN TO WORK

He has brought a $3,000,000 contract to Canada. He has put Canadian workmen to work and has established the most efficient small arms factory in the British Empire."

Drew said the committee's duty to order Major Hahn. His job was to find out if the contract was a good one said Col. Drew.

Chairman William Fraser (Lib., Northumberland) asked Col. Drew to refrain from suggesting to the committee what its duty was.

General L. R. LaFleche, deputy minister of defence was not responsible for negotiating the contract and any indictment of Hahn for fraud could not be made to the people General LaFleche, said Col. Drew.

Hon. Ian Mackenzie, minister of defence had a duty to make proper investigation of the information given him that led to the contracts execution.

Mr. McGeer said that when Hahn went to England to negotiate the contract with the British War Office he carried plans, photographs and sketches of the Inglis plant. There was no misrepresentation of the plant's status.

The plants description taken to England was quite inaccurate, said Col. Drew.

VICTORIA, June 2.—Inspector Forbes Cruickshanks, officer commanding "E" division of the British Columbia Police at Vancouver, Thursday was named assistant commissioner of the provincial force. He succeeds T. W. S. Parsons, recently named head of the force on the retirement of Col. J. H. McMillan.

YUGOSLAVIA GUARANTEED BY FUEHRER

Hitler in Exchange of Toasts With Prince Paul

BERLIN, June 2.—Chancellor Hitler guaranteed Yugoslavia's borders last night in an exchange of toasts with Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia, during a state dinner.

The German fuehrer said that the Yugoslavian regent's presence "We see a happy occasion for a frank and friendly exchange of views which I am convinced can only bring benefits to our people and states."

Stressing the friendship of Germany for Yugoslavia he said, "We have become neighbors with common borders established for all time."

Prince Paul, in responding, noted Hitler's expression of respect for the Balkan country's border with the Reich.

"My visit is a demonstration of the determined will of the Yugoslav people to live and work together with the German people in an atmosphere of peace and friendship," he said.

New Palestine Policy Termed Serious Mistake

MONTREAL, June 2.—The joint national committee for Zionist organizations in Canada in a statement Thursday deplored the British government's new Palestine policy as a "serious mistake," and expressed the hope the historic partnership between the British and Jewish peoples had not been ended.

The statement, issued by Rabb. Jesse Schwarz of the Zionist organization of Canada, said Canadian Jews share the dismay felt by Jews of the world at the new policy which proposes to curtail Jewish immigration and to "reduce Jews to a permanent minority of one-third of the population of Palestine."

Debunker

Many people believe that the corns which they remove from their toes grow from some sort of roots down deep in the skin, and that unless this root is cut out the corns will reappear. The truth is that corns never have a root; they are merely a hardened portion of the cuticle just like the hardened places that appear on the hands of a laborer. It does not matter how deep you cut to remove a corn (and this is a dangerous practice), it will not come back again as long as your shoes press upon your toes too hard. The only cure is more comfortable shoes, not knives.

What To Do

Here are a number of things I've wanted to know for a long time. I'll appreciate your answers very much. (1) I understand that a piece of meat is taken from the plate with fork prong down, and put into the mouth with the fork prongs up. Is that right? (2) When a girl and her date are leaving for a movie or other "pay" function, and a third party (either girl or boy) arrives unexpectedly, is it the girl's or the boy's place to invite the third party to go also? (3) I know that I may ask an invitation for an out-of-town guest anywhere but a dinner. If a friend should invite me to dinner, not knowing my guest is here, do I decline without giving any reason? Thank you. MISS J., Mich.

Answer—(1) The tines of the fork should be up both when the piece of meat is taken from the plate and when it is placed in the mouth. (2) When a girl has an engagement with a boy to go to the movies and a chance visitor happens to come in before you get started, it is up to the boy to invite the third party to join you. (3) If a friend invites you to dinner when you have a guest, you simply say: "I would be delighted to come, but Mary Smith is visiting me for a few days." This leaves it up to the hostess to invite Mary Smith too, if an extra guest fits in with her plans.

Elizabeth Conducts Own Household in Few Year's Time

Princess Elizabeth is growing up; she has just entered her 'teens. Recently there has been a big change in her position at the palace—a change with a policy behind it. No longer is she a little girl playing make-believe games with her sister in the garden on fine days and in the nursery when it rains.

No longer is she naively solemn when she appears in public.

Plans are already being made for her coming-out in three years' time. Before then she will be confirmed—about Easter, 1942.

After her coming-out she will be present at state banquets, undertake important public engagements attended by her own ladies-in-waiting and unaccompanied by any other member of the royal family.

The princess will then have her own tradesmen, her own accountant, her own income, and she will be addressed as "Your Royal Highness" even within the palace and not simply as she now is, "Princess."

NOT SPOILED

Meanwhile, the King's elder daughter is getting not precocious, but simply grown up. The King and Queen, who saw to it that she was not spoiled or petted as a child, are now seeing that she is given confidence in herself and opportunities to take the initiative.

Princess Elizabeth is being trained in a sense of her responsibilities, but not of her own importance.

All this is shown by definite changes in the palace routine.

The staff now refer to "the school room" and not "the nursery." The princesses' suite is treated as a separate part of the palace.

Princess Elizabeth has her own sitting-room, furnished with a bureau, apart from the rooms she shares with her sister. She has flowers of her own choice, specially delivered to her, to decorate her rooms.

She and her sister take their meals in simple state. "Two footmen, known as the princesses' footmen, wait at table.

HOSTESS IN OWN RIGHT

Princess Elizabeth is now a hostess in her own right. Seldom a week passes but she entertains young friends specially invited by herself—not just the children of friends visiting her parents.

She now gives small lunch and tea parties as well as the annual Royal Lodge Windsor, for its week-end. But if the King and Queen are delayed, the princesses' tutor or the governess princess helps to arrange the menu with the chef (at one time dishes were ordered by Mrs. Knight, who is in charge of the princesses' suite).

Princess Elizabeth can be trusted to choose suitable food. She is learning to master the niceties of international menu language.

A list of dishes is sent up to the schoolroom each morning at the same time as a long provisional menu is sent to the Queen.

Princess Elizabeth, consulting with her sister, chooses from this a shorter menu in the same way as her mother chooses for the King and herself a short meal—usually about four courses.

TASTE IS SOUND

The princess' taste in food is sound, in fact robust. It shows a cultivated palate. She likes consommé enriched with tomato sauce, grilled lamb chops and vegetables, and farola pudding.

When she gives tea parties the princess chooses the cakes, all home-made in the palace kitchens, and decides the fillings of the sandwiches.

At Christmas and birthday anniversaries the princess chooses the presents she gives to relatives and young friends. She also thanks and writes the greetings which accompany them.

Her writing is well formed and shows strength of character. Her signature especially shows a well-developed personality.

HAS OWN BODYGUARD

Another indication of the princess' emancipation from the nursery is the way her program is committed. She and her sister work entirely independently of their parents' plans.

Nearly every Friday afternoon, for instance, they all go down to Windsor, where she presented an

CITY POLICE PATROL WAGON EVEN HAS BEDS

Being arrested is going to be a pleasure and is apt to become a popular pastime in this city if Edmonton police do not very soon now on because the city police department has purchased a new streamlined, air-conditioned, high-powered and speedy patrol wagon.

The seats in the back compartment—which is the only part the average citizen is ever going to see on account these being usually two police officers sitting on the seats in the front—are fancy spring-lined, leather-covered affairs which are just about as comfortable as the average chesterfield.

They run down both sides. The interior is painted grey and the bars on the windows are very shiny. Also, the seats fold over to make a bed for prisoners who can't sit up.

The prisoners are kept entirely separate from the police officers, and access has something to say to passengers.

ACTIVE MEMBER

There are already indications that Princess Elizabeth will be in the not too distant future one of the most active members of the royal family.

She has already become patron of a charity, the Princess Elizabeth of York Hospital for Children. Also recently attended the Pony Show at the Royal Agricultural Hall, or set off as usual in their own car, driven by their own chauffeur, and with their own little retinue.

The princess is a good rider. She talks knowledgeably about horses, and knows has something to say to managers.

WENSTOB-WARRINGTON BOUT IS DRAW

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

Post Mortem

Grad Finale

Wire Roundup

POST MORTEM is the correct name for today's check-over of last night's dominion championship bout here. Unless I am badly mistaken, that amazing draw decision has killed boxing in Edmonton—at least until some local fighter arises with the knockout punch that seems to be the only magnet that will draw a paying gate.

Wenstob has definitely proved that he is at worst as good a figher as the eastern champion. Personally, I think he is definitely a better boxer than Warrington. The Tiger is a powerful, able and game battler. He is a crowd-pleaser and puts real fire into his work, but he lacks the finer polish that Wenstob has.

Neither Warrington nor Wenstob can be blamed for the sad state in which the game is left here. That draw decision left both fighters right where they were before last night. Warrington may be recognised as the dominion champion in the east, but he certainly has no recognition as such in the west. By the same token, Wenstob has only the western championships in the lightheavy and heavyweight divisions.

A return bout is imperative—but I don't think anyone here would care to undertake the staging of it. The gross house last night just managed to pass the three thousand dollar mark. Halifax is said to be interested in a Wenstob-Warrington battle, and Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, is also a possibility. I didn't hear a single patron last night who thought he hadn't got his money's worth, but the folks in these parts didn't turn out in enough numbers to warrant a second big gamble.

Had Wenstob won the title the situation would have been a great deal rosier. He would have an official seal of calibre. I think he definitely proved his right to the championship—but the decision of the judges stands and that is that.

World Lightheavy Title Mess

A[illegible]

The National Boxing Association still recognizes John Henry Lewis as the world's light heavyweight title-holder, although it has ordered him to take a thorough examination for his eye trouble and may declare his title vacant as a result. The British Board of Boxing Control has already barred Lewis owing to his failing eyes and refused to sanction a bout between him and Len Harvey.

The New York Boxing Commission, which generally disagrees with everybody else, has slipped this time. It has agreed with the British Board as to Lewis' eyes—but insists that the rightful champ is Melio Bettina. Needless to say, Melio is well tied up by Gotham fight interests.

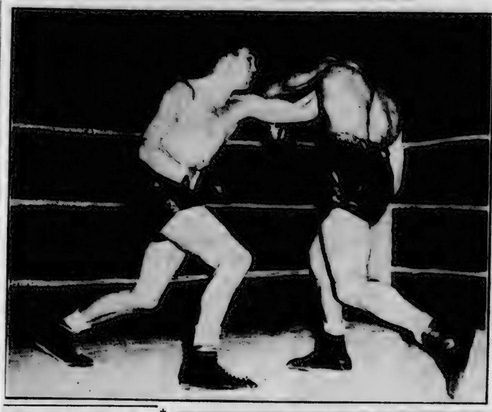
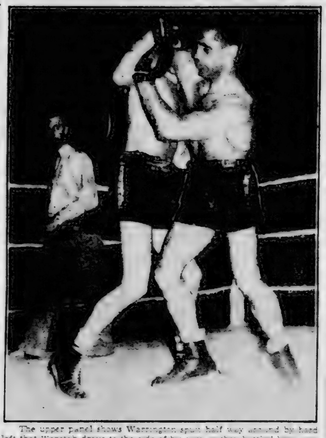
Scenes from the 'No Dice' Battle





The upper panel shows Warrington spun half way around by hard left that Wenstob drove to the side of his jaw, as they battled here over the 15-round route last night for the lightheavy and heavyweight championship of Canada. JIM CHAPMAN SCORES KAYO IN SEMI-MAIN

Doctor Claims Farr Was Hit Hard Over Heart; In Bad Condition

Jolting Jimmy Chapman, young Edmontonian who has packed sleeping powder in his right hand punches in his last two starts here, scored his second kayo triumph last night at the Arena as he dropped Johnny Farr, of Portland, in 30 seconds.

Chapman scored his knockout in the semi-windup bout to the Wenstob-Warrington card and featured the lengthy preliminary program.

Many who saw Farr fall thought the Portland puncher had taken an intentional "dive" to the canvas, but according to Dr. Eardley Allin, Farr was dropped to the floor by a stiff punch over the heart. Dr. Allin stated there was a swelling over the heart and that the Portland fighter had suffered further injuries to his head.

It was evident the way Farr stiffened out and the manner in which his muscles worked convulsively that he had been hit hard and from a seat in press row the lad looked in bad shape.

ANOTHER KNOCKOUT

A second knockout was the technical awarded Lindsay Guild who had Jackie Pickles helpless on the ropes in the fifth round of their six-round bout. Guild sent Pickles sprawling in the first round and he was down for the count of five. Up until the early seconds of the fifth Pickles took a terrific lacing but did manage to give Guild a cut just below the eye which made the blood run freely.

Western Champion Bottles Up Knockout Punch of Colored Tiger

By JACK KELLY
Edmonton Bulletin Sports Editor

NEITHER Eddie Wenstob nor Tiger Warrington is the dominion champion today after their torrid 15-round battle here at the Arena last night. The reason is that the judges in charge of naming a winner achieved a rare distinction by declaring the bout a draw regardless of the fact that a draw decision cannot be returned in such a title fight.

Officials of the Edmonton Boxing Commission declined to make public the way each judge marked his card, but stated that one had given Warrington a win, one had given Wenstob a win and another had called it a draw. Judges were Roy Hallburton, Johnny Smith and Referee Jerry Delane.

My own score card gave Wenstob seven rounds, Warrington four and perhaps five, and the other rounds were even.

It was a new Wenstob that battled the eastern Canada champion last night—a Wenstob who had recovered much of the fire and hitting power he had when he was fighting his way up to international recognition. While Warrington was never in serious danger of being knocked out, he was rocked back time after time with sledgehammer rights and lefts when he attempted to bull his way inside of Wenstob's defence by sheer strength.

DYNAMITE BOTTLED UP

Boxing cleverly and with fine ringcraft, the western champion never gave Warrington a chance to explode the knockout dynamite he is reputed to pack in his right hand. Before the fight he boasted he would put Wenstob on the canvas for the count no later than the 10th round. If the bout had gone 30 rounds, the Tan Tiger would not have been able to do it.

Wenstob wasted no time in cautious sparring as the bout started. Warrington missed a terrific right uppercut by three full inches and Wenstob leaped in to drive three hard short rights into the Tiger's midriff. They sparred for a moment and Warrington rushed like a mad bull. Wenstob tied him up without taking anything. Eddie landed a hard overhand right to the side of the head that backed the Tiger up. Just before the bell Wenstob drove a sharp right cross to the Tiger's jaw.

RUSHES BLOCKED

Warrington launched a series of short rushes as the second round started but Wenstob blocked [illegible] without taking anything more than a few blows on his forearms and shoulders. Twice the Tiger drove stiff left jabs in the westerner's face that made him wince. Warrington missed badly several times with sweeping swings. Wenstob registered a heavy right to the head just before the bell. Warrington won the round by a shade.

Wenstob took the third round. He landed a number of hard rights to the head and face although Warrington made him miss a couple of straight rights. The Tiger's furious rushes were tied up neatly and effectively.

There was little choice in the fourth round. Wenstob seemed to be coasting a bit. Both exchanged a number of light blows to the face and body.

TIGER IS STUNG

In the fifth Wenstob suddenly began pouring a hot barrage into Warrington's midriff, laying in a left and firing a hard right after it. The Tiger backed out as if he had run into a hot poker. Wenstob pressed his advantage and rocked Warrington with another body attack. The Tiger replied with stinging blows that Wenstob slipped neatly under. It was Wenstob's round by plenty.

The sixth was even and Wenstob took the seventh when his rapier-like left began flicking out to connect with Warrington's face. In the eighth they mixed it freely with a lot of heavy punching in which Wenstob appeared to land more clean-cut blows than Warrington. The Tiger displayed more caution in the ninth and evident respect for Wenstob's punching. The round was even.

TIGER LAUNCHES DRIVE

With the start of the 10th round Warrington launched his big bid for a knockout victory. Both indulged in long-range punching and a hard right opened a small cut on Wenstob's lips. Warrington won the round.

In the 11th the Tiger continued [illegible] offensive, driving Wenstob back to the ropes with a hard volley that landed around his head and shoulders. Warrington [illegible] a hard left uppercut to Wenstob's body that doubled him over for an instant. He straightened up at once, though. Just before the bell Warrington landed a left squarely on Wenstob's forehead. It was Warrington's round.

Warrington also took the 12th round as he maintained the role of aggressor. Early in the round he drove a crushing blow to the ribs under Eddie's left arm. It seemed to slow the western champ up for the balance of the round.

WENSTOB RALLIES

Wenstob came out for the 13th with a rush. He cracked a hard right into the Tiger's jaw and the latter countered with another [illegible] to the ribs. Eddie bounced Warrington back several paces with a right to the jaw and drubbed the easterner with a series of [illegible] body blows that had the [illegible] wild just before the bell. It was Wenstob's round.

Eddie took the 14th round with rights and lefts that he snapped over as he circled Warrington. For a moment or two he had Warrington wobbling near the middle of the ring.

The 15th round produced little difference between the two. Eddie slipped and fell once, but was up immediately.

LOU NOVA SCORES TECHNICAL KAYO OVER BAER

SNEAD TAKES LEAD IN GOLF ROUND-ROBIN

Leads in Goodall Tourney At White Plains By Two-hole Margin

NEW YORK, June 1. — Sam Snead, the Canadian open champion from White sulphur Springs, W.Va., race through the Fresh Meadow Country club's back nine in 33, three under par, Thursday, and staked a preliminary claim to the $1,000 first prize in the Goodall round-robin golf tournament.

His 33, with birdies on the 587-yard 15th and the 170, gave him an 18-hole score of 69, one under par, and the first-round lead with a plus 11 standing. This is based on the fact Sam won five holes from Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., former United States Professional Golfers' association champion, and six from Olin Dutra of Los Angeles, United States open king in 1934.

Snead and Harry Cooper of Eastern Point, Conn., also with 69, were the only players in the field of 15 top-notchers to break par, while only Ben Hogan of White Plains, N.Y., equalled standard figures with a 70. Hogan took advantage of poor showings by his rivals, Tony Penna of Dayton, O., and Henion Smith of Oak Park, Ill., to pile up a second place total of plus nine.

Cooper, finishing two up on Walter Hagen and five up on Denny Shute of Huntington, W.Va., placed third with plus seven.

Referee Stops Bout In Eleventh Round

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, June 2.—Lou Nova, blond Alameda, Cal., youngster, punched Max Baer's face into a bloody mess last night and stopped the ex-heavyweight champion via the technical knockout route in 11 rounds. Baer weighed 210½, Nova 202.

Referee Frankie Fulham halted the bout at 1:21 of the 11th after Nova, recovering from several righthand shots that shook him in the earlier rounds, cut Max's face with short right chops and stabbing left hands.

The referee said he halted the contest because of a bad cut inside Baer's mouth, the blood from which seemed to be choking the former titleholder.

LOU HAD MARGIN

Nova held a slight margin on points through the 10 full rounds of the scheduled 15-round fight, despite the fact he lost two, the fourth and fifth, for low punching.

The seventh was taken away from Baer for hitting after the bell. However, it was the stronger in the first few rounds, but Max's righthand shots in the fifth and sixth weakened him considerably.

However, he recovered with the start of the seventh and was hitting Baer almost at will from midway of the seventh through to the end.

CUTS NOVA'S EYE

One of Max's left hooks cut Lou's right eye in the fourth, and Baer drew blood from this several times afterward.

A disappointing crowd of 16,738 cash customers turned out in cool, cloudy weather for the bout. The gross gate of $82,264.63 fell far short of Promoter Mike Jacob's $100,000 hopes.

His face dripping blood, his mouth and nose cut, Baer, the madcap playboy who has clowned his way through the finite firmament for a decade, came to the end of the trail with the lethal knockout defeat.

And Nova, shaken up in the early rounds, once so confused with Max's righthand punches that he walked to the wrong corner at the end of one session, successfully rocketed to a shot at the heavyweight championship in September.

Most impressive was Nova's gameness in coming on from those fearful righthand shots for which Max is famous; taking them and walking right in with both fists flailing.

FORCES THE FIGHTING

Lou waded in from start to finish, connected with a spearlike left jab and a short right chop countless times, and, even when hurt, continued to force the fighting. At the finish, his left eye swollen from Baer's righthand smashes, his right hand injured and his right eye cut, Nova still was pitching gamely.

On the Associated Press score card, Nova had six rounds to four for maxie. Two heats, the fourth and fifth, were taken away from Nova for hitting low. The seventh was taken from Maxis for clouting Lou after the bell.

This punch almost did for Nova, incidentally. He staggered away from it, wandered aimlessly in the centre of the ring for a moment, and then was called to his corner by his handlers.

JOHANNESBURG, June 2

Five hundred German-Jewish refugees have expressed their desire to help the government in every way possible in time of national emergency.

Representatives of these refugees who have found homes in South Africa have called upon Dr. Louis Franklin Freed, founder of the newly-formed civic fellowship of South Africa, and announced their intention of enlisting as the basis later of a special Westlake Women's which will be inaugurated by the fellowship.

Many of these are not yet settled and are unable to undertake [illegible] Time and [illegible] together, however, gives them the opportunity of making a patriotic gesture.

"We are anxious and willing to discharge our obligations to the country which has given us sanctuary," said the spokesman of the deputation. "We are willing to do and die for South Africa. We are anxious to serve."

YOUTHFUL MOTORCYCLIST HURT IN THRILL SHOW

Big Crowd Watches Drivers Risk Lives

NEARLY 5,000 persons crowded into the grandstand enclosure at the Exhibition Grounds Thursday evening to watch dare-devil Flash Williams and his Thrill Drivers crash their cars through a flaming shack, risk death in the famous T-bone crash stunt, and put their special machines through antics guaranteed to send a quiver down the toughest spine.

Only dark spot in the entire program was when youthful motorcyclist Billy Foster, of 10714 126 street, crashed into the fence on the west end of the track when his cycle got out of control on the turn on the second lap of a three-lap race. He suffered severe head injuries.

Riding a new powerful motorcycle, Foster had been leading and when his machine got out of control was fighting for the lead with Con Heighington, 4 Mortlake block. In great was the shock of his impact against the fence that the belt he was wearing was smashed.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

A Jack Hayes ambulance was on the scene, and Art Hayes and Vern Johnson, the two drivers, lifted the unconscious youth into the ambulance and raced him to the Royal Alexandra hospital. He had regained semi-consciousness by the time they reached the hospital.

Due to the dust on the track and the fact that the setting sun was shining just over the fence where the accident occurred, only a very few persons realized that anything was amiss until the ambulance raced across the field.

One of the first persons to reach the injured cyclist was Flash Williams himself who helped to lift him onto the stretcher.

RISK THEIR LIVES

Williams and his chief assistant, Roy Mortensen, risked their lives several times during the evening's thrills, much to the crowd's delight. They expected. Williams put his racing machine over ramps and finally crashed it through a flaming shack.

Mortensen jumped the car over a ramp and then crashed it through the model machine, reducing it to a shambles—his own machine turning end-over-end once. He received a tremendous ovation from the crowd as he stepped from the wrecked machine.

"Ossie the Clown" stole the show with his crazy antics, while the special novelty race put on by the Edmonton Motorcycle club added another lighter note to the exciting entertainment.

Thrill drivers were Flash Williams, Roy Mortensen, Herb and Howard Ahlgren, Art Siemers, the clown, Pat Higgs, a Canadian boy.

Cyclists taking part in the show were Con Heighington, Jack Sampest, Alex MacKenzie, Nick Sawchuk, Johnny Simmons, Freddy Furse, Jack Shannon, Freddie Jacobson, Helmuth Goertz, Tommy Richards, Red Parsons, Bob Klatt, Hector Spense, George Ramsell, Bert Bennett, Tommy Wiley, Frank Winters, Walter Mulneck, L. Bibot, W. Lister and Billy Foster.

Kangaroo Menace

HOBART, June 2. — Tasmanian kangaroos are so numerous they are a danger to motorists, straying over busy highways. As a result, an open season for kangaroos is to be declared.

Believe It Or Not ——— By Robt. Ripley

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

THE FIRE FOUNTAIN: Fire and water flowing simultaneously from the same fountain, have been a familiar paradox in Colfax, Louisiana, for more than 40 years. The fountain came into existence in 1899 through an attempt to drill a water well. A mixture of salt water and gas bubbled forth instead of the hoped-for drinking water. The gas was ignited to prevent it from endangering the town.

"FAREWELL to SPORT" by PAUL GALLICO

Thought Versus Time and Space

IN SPORT, and advances made, a great deal depends on what you think you can do and what you are used to doing. When I was rowing on the Columbia crew back in 1916-17-20-21, the four-mile race at Poughkeepsie was rowed with a fast racing start of about 36 to 40 strokes a minute, then quickly dropped to 32, and then down to 28 for the long grind. There might be an occasional spurt when the stroke would be raised slightly for ten, but most of the time the boats slogged along at that pace, 28, relying on smoothness, power, and the driving kick at the finish to keep ahead of competing eights. The last half-mile we would whoop it up to 32 again-and possibly hit 38-40 in the final scramble for the finish line, and then keel over.

The four-mile race rowed that way, was, as far as I was concerned, the absolute limit of my endurance. I was used to that, keyed to it, trained to it.

In my last year in the boat, 1921, Navy sent an eight-oared crew up to Poughkeepsie that rowed at 40 strokes to the minute all the time in practice. They were an object of considerable derision along the river, where the old-time crews, Syracuse, Cornell, Penn, Columbia, had their boathouses and training quarters. We just let them go because we knew that before they had rowed a mile at that pace in the big race, they would collapse and be out of it. All of us, coaches and oarsmen alike, but especially those of us who pushed the oars, knew that it was impossible to row four miles swing 40 strokes to the minute.

The Navy, however, did not seem to know that, because on regatta day they hit 44 at the start at Krum Elbow and then rowed 40 the whole four-miles down the course to the finish line a mile below the bridge, and nobody was even close. Their stroke wasn't as long as ours and it wasn't as rhythmic and pretty. However, this wasn't a beauty contest, but a boat-race, and they finished way out in front and were sitting up in the boat after they crossed the line.

Today, all boat-races are rowed at a higher stroke and the oarsmen survive beautifully. And just as people interested in rowing were congratualting themselves on this new and final development of the sport, along comes a Japanese crew to the Henley Regatta on the upper Thames in 1936 and rowed fifty-two, all the way down the Henley course.

I happened to be on the Thames one afternoon and quite by accident ran across them out for a practice spin. From force of habit I clocked them and came away a little dazed, knowing that one of us must be crazy. They didn't win in the finals, because, fast as their stroke was, it was too choppy to be one hundred per cent efficient, but nothing during that time could do it at all. Will a crew some day row sixty strokes to the minute, a stroke a second? Why not?

SOFTENING IT UP

One broken record usually precipitates a whole host of them because the smashed mark immediately changes the mental attitude of athletes toward the task of wrecking it further. We borrow a term from boxing and call it "softening up." A crack sprinter will run the hundred yards in 9.6, then world's record time, and never improve on it. Along will come a new phenom and lower the world's record to 9.4. The 9.6 man will suddenly, to his own great surprise, do it in 9.4 too. Why? Because he knows it can be done, has been done. The English Channel was an impassible barrier of water, wind, waves and currents for women swimmers until Gertrude Ederle softened it up by making a successful passage under her own power. After that they had to have trifle cops to keep other women who succeeded in doing the same thing from swimming over and under.

By 1942 the hundred yards will have been run in 9.1 and possibly in 9 seconds flat, the mile in 4.6 and high jumpers will be squirming over the bar at seven feet while the pole vaulters do fifteen. The track coach may laugh at this as a physical and mechanical impossibility, but it will be the same kind of laugh as the one given three decades ago by track experts at the thought of a 4.07 mile, the 9.05 hundred, or a running jump over a bar placed at six feet nine and one-eighth inches.

At the standard distance in Yardsticks not a single world's record has been broken since the 1500 and the same is true of the metric distances with the exception of the 5,000-meter record made by Paavo Nurmi in 1924. The marks set by the heroes and champions of 1900 and 1910 are wiped off the books. They are forgotten.

WHY NOT?

There is no reason for believing anything but the same fate will overtake the present-day crop. We are good all right but we're not perfect by any means yet. There is the valuable aid of the strange, spongy, gray matter that fills the tops of our skulls to be considered. It does play its part. If you need any further proof, look at the track records made by racehorses bred solely for speed and stamina. Some of them still go 'way back to 1890. The human being bred at random, manages to develop faster.

Elephants' Ears Make Table Tops

LONDON, June 2. — It may be true that you can't make "a silk purse out of a sow's ear," but Squadron Leader T. C. Pattinson, well-known big game hunter, has found a practical use for elephants' ears. He uses them for table-tops.

Returning to England from a safari in East Africa, Mr. Pattinson, who lives in Westmorland, brought with him the ears of a 3½ ton bull elephant which he shot in Kenya. He is going to have one of the ears made into a top for a fair-sized table and the other into sections for two or three smaller tables. "They make," he says, "excellent table tops because they are easily washed and never wear out."

THIS sounds like an exaggeration—but it's not! The document containing this formula for London Dry Gin is locked away in our vault and only one man in the organization (William Strange, famous gin distiller from London, England) knows what's in it. This generations-old formula has made world-famous the "London Dry" type of gin—and now it is used to make the UDL brand of London Dry Gin, "SILVER FIZZ."

BUT THAT'S NOT ALL! To get the best out of this famous formula, crystal-clear, non-alkaline water is essential. Fortunately, Vancouver is abundantly supplied in this respect.

These are the reasons why UDL London Dry Gins are "Famed Around the World."

Unsung Heroes Behind Royal Parade Keep Automobiles Moving

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., June 2.—The men behind the Royal parade have been unhonored and unsung as yet. Day after day the Royal automobiles move smoothly and silently at the head of the motorcade, and not once have they faltered and stopped or indulged in a flat tire.

It would have been embarrassing in the long parade in Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Calgary, Victoria or Vancouver, or Thursday's procession in Jasper, if the Royal automobile acted up even as yours and mine.

That they don't act up is due to the twelve men (an automobile jury) behind the scenes.

12 MECHANICS

The Royal automobiles, four of them, used in twos by turn, are under the care of six Royal Canadian Army Service Corps mechanics and six Royal Royal Air Force mechanics. As the train rolls along carrying each two cars to the next place, they overhaul machinery, tires, everything. They keep the cars as clean and polished and shiny as a showroom model.

The Royal chauffeur, who normally is the chauffeur of the Governor General, and the prime minister's chauffeur, who carries out the same duties in Ottawa, have had no trouble waiver. There has not been a single hitch in the smooth easy running of the cars and not a misfire or a flat tire.

SPECIALLY BUILT

The four cars are specially built models, McLaughlin-Buicks, Lincolns and Chevalers, and there are rumors around already that all four are the object of fabulous bids when they will be sold after the Royal tour. It's something to have a car in which the King and Queen have ridden to the plaudits of multitudes.

CANADA BESTOWS BIG SALES TALK ON OLD READING

OTTAWA, June 2.—Canada's first attempt at a concentrated "high pressure" sales campaign for Canadian merchandise in the United Kingdom proved a high success in the old city of Reading, England.

Officials of the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce have received a full report on the Reading experiment from the British advertising agents who organized the week of concentrated selling of Canadian goods, and it may be the forerunner of similar ventures elsewhere.

Stores in the ancient Berkshire capital 38 miles southwest of London stayed extremely co-operative for the "Canada Calling Reading" week, and the city's 100,000 inhabitants were made "Canadian conscious" by the most lavish advertising and window-dressing campaign that city had ever seen.

The four Reading newspapers carried large display advertisements and lengthy news articles describing Canada and its produce. Films selected from Dominion government film libraries were exhibited to full house audiences of both school children and adults at the local motion picture theatre. Free movie tickets and advertisement packages of matches extolling Canadian goods were distributed free at restaurants and hotels.

The schools had special lessons on Canada and her exports, and Canadian foods were taken into the domestic science classrooms and prepared by cookery students according to Canadian recipes. School students took part in an essay competition on Canada and Canadian goods and the Dominion government awarded special prizes.

As a follow-up to the campaign, the agents later interviewed managers of stores stocking Canadian goods, and they all reported great increases in demand for the Dominion's products, some of them reporting tripled volume.

ORDER PAPER IN COMMONS WIPED CLEAN

All Business Except Mortgage Bank Bill Is Disposed Of

OTTAWA, June 2—In a sudden burst of speed the House of Commons last night wiped its order paper clean of all business except the Central Mortgage Bank bill which will be considered today. It adjourned for the evening with hopes of prorogation before the end of the week after voting $98,000,000 in estimates.

[illegible] contested as the Supply bill was about to be passed. He said the Liberal party opposed a financing scheme on one and one-half years with estimates running into the [illegible].

READING POSTPONED

Justice Minister Hon. Ernest Lapointe on motion proposing leader, moved to postpone third reading of the Supply bill, agreed to formally, until Friday. At that time he announced the Central Mortgage Bank bill, amended after amendments in the banking committee, would also be ready for consideration.

Resolutions passed yesterday included the remainder of the appropriations for the Department of Labor and Public Works. The Labor resolutions included the $27,000,000 vote from which grants are made to provincial governments for unemployment relief.

ROGERS COMMENDED

Two opposition members, Denton Massey (Con., Toronto-Greenwood), and A. A. Heaps (CCF, Winnipeg North), commended Labor Minister Hon. Norman Rogers for his diligence in dealing with unemployment matters. Neither, however, was able to praise governmental policy on [illegible].

"I think our policies have met with some degree of success," said Mr. Rogers in reply. "I may say that I expect to continue applying them on an expanding scale and with a larger degree of success in the [illegible].

DOCTOR PROTESTS MEDICAL RACKET

HASTINGS, Eng., June 2.—A 34-year-old Hastings medical practitioner has launched a one-man war against what he calls "the medical racket" in the British Isles.

Waging his campaign under the pseudonym of "Dr. Futuer," he now threatens to bring in a number of consultant surgeons to help him fight those who boycott him.

"Many British medical men," he says, "do nothing except write certificates, prescribe medicine, rush to over-burdened hospitals, rush out again, burn petrol and think they [illegible] time for people who can pay."

"Dr. Futuer," who strongly advocates [illegible] with a nation-wide chain of clinics, also accuses the British Medical Association of hindering progress. The Rome-Berlin political axis, he describes as a danger to the world, but not as great as that of the British-American medical axis.

"This axis is a danger to the lives of those who make up the two great democracies. They dictate a system of medicine as antiquated as an ox-cart," he added.

Tragic Mapping

DELHI, June 2.—Remapping of India by the army has resulted in the killing of an Indian by a tiger, death by a fall in the Himalayas and serious injury by lightning suffered by an officer.

INDIANS REGRET ROYAL CHILDREN NOT WITH KING

CALGARY, June 2.—The [illegible] Canada of King George and Queen Elizabeth [illegible] for Alberta Indians—the [illegible] and Margaret Rose.

Tribesmen of the Stoneys, Crees and Chippewas, now en route from their trap lines to Calgary and Banff to participate in the royal welcome, were keenly disappointed to learn Their Majesties had left the "papooses" at home.

The explanation the royal children had to continue [illegible] didn't impress the [illegible] can lay any lesson or task aside when a trip is in prospect.

From the mountains, many of the Indians are travelling 100 to 200 miles to see Their Majesties. For months they have been preparing [illegible]

"My squaw do nothing but sew [illegible] Father. She wouldn't trap or chop wood or clean fish. Too busy. Just work on clothes all the time."

All will have new wardrobes. New beaded headdresses [illegible] with feathers, fancy [illegible] and gauntlets, belts and coats.

German-Danish Non-Aggression Pact Published

BERLIN, June 2.—Publication of the brief German-Danish non-aggression pact Thursday showed that both countries had been left a free hand in commercial relations with other nations in case of war. The treaty, to last 10 years, was signed yesterday.

Freedom in wartime trade was interpreted as a departure from Nazidom's previous tendency to insist that any country with which Germany concluded a mutual non-aggression accord must not trade with states in conflict with her.

Pretty English Girl Is Wed To Malayan Prince

OXFORD, England, June 2.—The pretty daughter of an English [illegible] became a Malayan princess Thursday when she married Prince Mahmud of Trengganu at St. Giles registry office here.

The bride, 21-year-old Joyce Blencowe, a chiropodist, and the bridegroom, brother of the Sultan of the Malayan state of Trengganu, received many wedding gifts.

Natives Sentenced

RAMPUR, India, June 2.—Three natives Thursday were sentenced to death and five were sentenced to life for the murder last January of Major R. L. Hazalgette, political agent for the Orissa states.

Vigorous Wheat Growth Visible Over Most Of Western Prairies

WINNIPEG, June 2.—Vigorous growth of wheat is visible over most of the western prairies, following generous heavy rains, in some districts early sown wheat is six inches high, according to Canadian Pacific Railway agents reporting this week to the company's agricultural department at Winnipeg.

In Alberta conditions are mostly ... rainfall ... need for more ... general ... the central ... and central parts.

HOPPER DAMAGE

All three provinces report some early damage from grasshoppers already hatched. Poison bait from mixing stations is being spread to ... of the pest. Some injury is reported ... and gophers.

Prairie weather has been unsettled ... past week, but to have ... complete ... the exception of sun green-... Moisture conditions are good ... Crops are well forward, to date ... considerably over last ... of the same time.

Manitoba was most favored in the rainfall especially in areas most needing it.

CONDITIONS IMPROVED

Conditions in central and southwestern areas are considerably improved over last week.

Saskatchewan reports less rain and present need now for more in northern ... further setback to crops due to lack of moisture. Northern ... of this province would still benefit by more rain.

President

The only candidate, and not even in the country on election day, Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia, Paraguayan minister to U.S., was chosen president of his nation. He headed Paraguay's army in Chaco war.

A bridegroom, Robert Taylor bemoaned the fact that he had to return to screen work making love to another woman—Hedy Lamarr. Substitutes are pouring into Hollywood.

SWEDISH WOMEN ADVANCE AGAIN

STOCKHOLM, June 2.—By passing a law ensuring that married ... shall not ... reason to lose ... employment, the Swedish parliament has endowed them with another legal benefit designed to safeguard equality of status.

Swedish women are already eligible for all public offices and in principle for the highest posts in the state. They may become solicitors, ministers, judges; in fact there is no legal bar to their entry into any profession or service except the army and the church. The new law concerning the employment of married women implies that as from July 1 women may not be dismissed from employment by reason of their becoming engaged or married or having children.

PUSH RE-ARMING IN SOUTH AFRICA

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, June 2.—Organization of the union's engineering industry to cooperate with the government in production of armament is virtually complete. The first order for guns have been placed.

The intention is to manufacture in the union trench mortars, heavy artillery and ultimately tanks.

A further development, according to the Rand Daily Mail, Johannesburg, is that representatives of the Skoda Works in former Czechoslovakia, will come to the union to ... superintend the manufacture of the ... machine gun in the union.

Schemes to increase the output of ammunition are well advanced. The Pretoria branch of the royal mint is working full capacity on the manufacture of 3000 rifle ammunition ...

CONGRATULATIONS!

ALBERTA PEOPLE have demanded economic reform so that the vast resouces of their Province might be developed to give security to all. Events have proven that these reforms can not be carried out until the people have regained undisputed control of their own credit resources. Events have proven, also, that they can regain this control only through the operation of their own institutions. To establish such institutions has become the vital need of economic reform.

This need is being fulfilled. During a period of six months, the People of Alberta have established 22 Treasury Branches and 270 Treasury Branch Agencies as shown on the accompanying map. Co-operation among producers, marketers and consumers has made this achievement possible.

Further expansion, resulting in increased employment and greater purchasing power for all who participate, will follow if hearty support of, and demand for, Treasury Branch Service continues. Already organization work is under way for the establishment of 10 more Branches and 250 more Agencies within the next two months in preparation for the harvest season.

For the excellent progress already made, we extend to the People of Alberta our hearty congratulations and add the assurance that, through their Treasury Branch Service, they will receive prompt, efficient service at all times.

HON. SOLON E. LOW,
Provincial Treasurer.

Purposes . . .

1. To provide the People of Alberta with their own facilities of transacting business at a minimum cost.
2. To promote the manufacture of Alberta-made goods through the payment of bonuses on consumer purchases.
3. To create local employment through the stimulation of demand for Alberta - made goods.
4. To increase local purchasing power by putting more Alberta People to work.
5. To provide a wider market for agricultural products by increasing the purchasing power of the consumer.

Services . . .

1. Business transaction accommodation is provided in numerous points throughout the Province where such activities did not exist.
2. Provision is maintained for the operation of Current, Demand and Term Savings Accounts; Collection of Drafts; Sale of Money Orders; Purchase and Sale of Foreign Exchange; Deposit of Securities for Safe Keeping.
3. Accounting facilities are provided to supply customers with a ready means of exchanging services for goods without the use of currency through the medium of Transfer Vouchers.
4. Consumers are given a bonus of three per cent. on purchases made by transfer vouchers on the basis of monthly purchases. The consumer is given this bonus on total purchases, one-third of which must be Alberta-made goods. In other words, the purchase of one dollar's worth of made-in-Alberta goods entitles the consumer to the bonus on this dollar plus the bonus on two dollars' worth of any other goods purchased by vouchers from registered merchants.

How to Use Treasury Branch Services

Go to your Treasury Branch or Agency and open an account in the ordinary way. Deposit your cash or transfer vouchers in a current or savings account as you desire. One dollar will open an account. If you want to use your deposits for current expenses, open a current account. If you want to deposit savings, open a savings account. If you want your savings so that you may withdraw them at any time open a Demand Savings account which pays 1½ per cent. per annum, but if you do not want them until some future date, open a Term Savings account which will pay you 2% or 2½% per annum on six- or twelve-month terms. Savings deposits of transfer vouchers will pay you 2½% and 3% per annum on six- and twelve-month terms.

You will be provided with a Branch Pass Book in which will be recorded the amount and nature of your deposit. You will be given a book of Cash Order Forms which are cheques and readily negotiable. You will be given also a book of Transfer Vouchers which are not negotiable but which may be used for the purchase of all goods from any co-operating merchant.

You may exchange vouchers for goods at any store if the merchant will accept them. Some unregistered merchants object to taking vouchers because unregistered merchants can redeem vouchers only at a two per cent discount and such purchases do not give the purchaser the 3% bonus. If such merchants were registered, their vouchers would be the same as cash for replacement of goods and the purchaser would receive the 3% bonus. No restriction bars any merchant, large or small, from registering. There are no fees or licenses. They are asked only to open under agreement an account in a Treasury Branch or Agency to accommodate their customers who have accounts in Treasury Branches or Agencies.

Purchases made by vouchers from registered merchants entitle the purchaser to the 3% bonus. STORES OF REGISTERED MERCHANTS ARE IDENTIFIED BY THE "MADE-IN-ALBERTA" TRADE MARK PLAINLY DISPLAYED ON THEIR DOORS. Facsimilies of this trade mark are shown on each side of this explanation.

If you are travelling an additional service is supplied by the Treasury Branch Service. You may use Certified Transfer Vouchers. These vouchers are certified by your Branch and come under the same category as certified cheques but they have an additional protection in that they carry the identification feature of Travellers' Cheques. You sign them in the presence of the clerk who gives them to you and you sign them in the presence of the person who accepts them. Thus only you can use them and, if they are lost, they are worthless.

Finally, your current or savings deposits made in Treasury Branches or Agencies are placed in a Trust Fund and NOT IN THE GENERAL REVENUE FUND OF THE PROVINCE. This Trust Fund is secured by the Province of Alberta, the wealth of its natural resources and the producing power of its people. FURTHERMORE, every deposit made in a Treasury Branch or Agency helps to stimulate Alberta industries and increases the purchasing power of Alberta's citizens.

Mother Nature Richly Endows Province With Non-Metallic Riches

Alberta Producer Of Oil, Natural Gas, Salt, Gypsum, Sands

Regarded As Unique In Sister Communities Of Dominion—Performance in 1938 Shows Petroleum Record

By J. L. IRWIN
Statistician, Dept. of Lands and Mines, Government of the Province of Alberta

Alberta is a producer of non-metallic minerals. In this respect she might be regarded as somewhat unique amongst her sister provinces of the Dominion, for she owns, to a very large extent, what the rest of Canada does not.

The principal non-metallic minerals of this province are oil, natural gas, coal, bituminous sands, salt and gypsum. Some day, the 10,000 square miles in the north-eastern part of Alberta—containing the south-western boundary of Canada's great Precambrian Shield—may be discovered to be productive of gold or other metals. Should this happen, Alberta will then become a producer also of metallic, as well as non-metallic, minerals.

J. L. IRWIN

In 1938 Alberta produced 97 per cent of Canada's oil and over 70 per cent of the Dominion's natural gas. She possesses a vast majority of Canada's coal and the largest accumulation of bituminous sand deposits in the world—deposits which contain countless millions of tons of oil.

Alberta Oil

At the close of 1938 Alberta as an oil producer reached a record annual total of 6,742,039 barrels, bringing the total production from 1914 to 1938 to 20,514,341 barrels. The bulk of this amount has been recovered within the last 10 years, with practically a third of it having been produced last year.

Alberta's performance in 1938 brought this province up to second place in the British Empire for oil production, and the increase in the world among countries showing increases for this year.

A detailed review of Alberta's oil situation may be secured on application to the Department of Lands and Mines.

Natural Gas

Natural gas occurrences are prevalent throughout the length and breadth of Alberta.

Gas consumption over a period of the last 10 years approximates a total of 205,000,000 Mcf with a commercial valuation of some $50,000,000 to which may be added another $25,000,000 as approximate valuation of oil recoveries from 1914 to 1938.

As previously stated, gas fields, either in operation or standing in reserve, are plentiful in Alberta and are so situated geographically as to be able to offer the many benefits of this most valuable natural product not only to the residents of this province but also to those in areas beyond its borders.

It is well to remember that despite the tremendous recent advances which have been made in the history of Alberta's oil and natural gas development, the industry is still in its infancy. Very few of the known oil structures have yet been tested and, in the words of Dr. G. S. Hume of Ottawa, "At no time have the prospects for discovery of new fields in Alberta been better than at present."

Alberta's Coal

The largest percentage of Canada's coal areas lies within the boundaries of Alberta. So vast is this accumulation that it may be definitely stated that a reasonable percentage of the world's coal supply belongs to this province. An estimate of Alberta's present accessible coal reserves gives an approximate total of 61 billion tons. The estimate of reserves at present inaccessible, but classed as coal land of commercial consideration at the present time, if added to this future, would absorb a tremendous total of approximately 327 billion tons.

In realizing such a fact it is therefore not surprising to [illegible] great that this great Alberta industry is not as prosperous as it obviously deserves to be.

The Province of Alberta is presumably assisted by a subvention in freight rate to Ontario of $2.50 per net ton where the ordinary rate is $8.00 or over. The value which this assistance has been brought to the province may be illustrated by planning as what actually happened and by taking for an example Alberta's coal exports for 1935.

During that year this province shipped only 64,659 tons of coal to Ontario which in the same period that province imported from the United States, in addition to shipments from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, 10,810,959 tons. Alberta's shipments to Ontario in this particular year, in comparison with these imports from the United States on which tariffs up to 76c per ton were paid, represent a somewhat discouraging one-half of one per cent.

Not Generous

This illuminating and depressing revelation which is repeated year by year, is attributable solely to the fact that the subvention rate is not sufficiently generous to enable Alberta coal to enter an eastern Canadian province and compete with it on equal terms.

Such a revelation of course [illegible] only the conclusion. A conclusion which must quite forcibly demonstrate the fact that pending a fair and reasonable adjustment of the situation, Alberta, holding the bulk of Canada's coal reserves, must continue to be largely negative regarding [illegible] development whilst eastern Canada continues to be supplied with her fuel requirements from foreign countries.

A general classification of Alberta's at present accessible coal might be given as follows: bituminous, 59 per cent; sub-bituminous, 33 per cent and lignite or domestic, 8 per cent. Discoveries of anthracite in occasional pockets have been made but commercial quantities under this classification have not yet been found.

The principal output of the bituminous coal areas of the province is at the Crowsnest, at Canmore, Nordegg and at Mountain Park, all of the sub-bituminous at Saunders Creek, Pioneer Creek, Coalspur, Prairie Creek and Belloko, and of the lignite or domestic, at Lethbridge, Drumheller and Edmonton. In addition to these districts there are several others where production is carried on.

High Grade Coal

The highest grade coal beds of Alberta are perhaps the deposits lying just east of Banff, the deposits in the district of Sheep Creek in the southern part of the province and those in the vicinity of Smoky River in the north.

The product of these three areas emanates from a cretacious base and is described as a very high grade, low volatile, semi-bituminous coal. The deposits in the vicinity of Banff are regarded as the highest in grade of these three. Coal, similar in quality and reported to be evident just beyond the Alberta boundary in the neighborhood of Hudson Hope, British Columbia.

Production of coke and briquetting has shown a steady increase in recent years. Coke manufactured in 1932 totalled 2,183 tons and in 1937, 65,567 tons. The production of briquettes in 1937 reached a total of 15,102 tons, and in 1937, 27,044 tons.

Production of coal in 1937 showed an increase of 987,392 tons over the total given for 1931. An increase in the purchase of electrical power used by the coal mines of the province is demonstrated by the total in 1937 of 25,483,240 k.w. hrs. as compared with the total in 1931 of [illegible] k.w. hrs.

Demarcation

It is a remembrance that the boundary line between Alberta and British Columbia is representative also of a definite line of division between the geological formations of the two provinces.

Immediately across the border on the British Columbia side the strata changes from carboniferous to metalliferous and continues in this formation to the Pacific coast on Vancouver Island, however, it changes back again to carboniferous. The result is that with the exception of Vancouver Island and small sections which exist in Princeton, Michel and Fernie, there is no coal mining in British Columbia on any large scale.

There are 106 by-products of bituminous coal including asphalt, aspirin, acids, dyes, tar, gas, benzol, pitch, coke, lamp black, gasoline, etc. Each of these is representative of a possible future industry and a great deal may be dependent, with the coming of improved economic conditions and increased population, on assistance given by the Research Council of th University of Alberta with a view to the success of such development.

Oil From Coal

Hydrogenation or the extraction of oil from coal might perhaps be regarded as one of the most important of these. It is a process carried out on a large scale in Great Britain and one which may at a future date be successfully operated in Alberta.

The coal-beds of the Saunders Creek and Coalspur areas are considered the most suitable for this form of processing due to the fact that they are sub-bituminous in classification and possess a minimum of 30 per cent volatile matter. Lignite coal of the plains of a certain type and possessing sufficient volatility can also be successfully subjected to the hydrogenation process.

The quantity of gasoline extracted from one (1) [illegible] is at the rate of 1,400 lbs. or 170½ gallons to every 3½ tons of coal. The latest report on coal of the process, including use of fuel is 11d. or 22c per gallon.

The process in Alberta is not however, practicable as yet for the reason that the cost of 22c per gallon is economically unable to compete with the cost of about 10c per gallon in recoveries from oil.

Gives Protection

Production of crude petroleum in the United Kingdom in 1936 totalled 119,000 long tons or 840,100 barrels. These recoveries were made principally from the hydrogenation of coal with a small percentage secured from the mining of shale and without the possession of a single producing oil well. The industry in Great Britain is made possible by a protective tariff of 8d per gallon.

The day will unquestionably arrive when this new industry will also become possible in Alberta. Its eventual introduction into the province should in the course of time not only prove a powerful and invaluable ally to Alberta's oil industry, but result also in a tremendous increase in the development of the province's coal mines and automatically create for such development a very much larger demand for labor.

The prospect of such a change in the future at least [illegible] is itself as one possible way out of the stagnation into which unjust discrimination has driven the development of the vast and extremely wealthy coal areas of this province.

Changing Scenes in Turner Valley

Once the sight of league long cattle ranges and buffalo wallows, the advent of oil in Turner Valley has resulted in numerous thriving townsites springing up almost overnight. Above is shown the original Turner Valley townsite.

Bituminous Sands

The bituminous sands of northern Alberta represent one of Alberta's most valued possessions. The reports of engineers dealing with these vast deposits, their present accessibility, methods of recovery and analysis of products to be obtained, carry a real interest.

There are many sights of interest for travellers in northern Alberta, the most interesting of all being without question the spectacle of the great cliffs and slopes of three bituminous sands along the banks of the Athabasca River. The exposures, some of which attain a height of 200 feet and more, are noticeable for 100 miles along the river and extend for a considerable distance up its tributary streams.

Fort McMurray represents the focal point for these deposits. From this centre they extend 65 miles down the Athabasca where they terminate against recent [illegible] deposits, 65 miles or more east on the Clearwater, the eastern limit not yet being mapped and 40 miles south-west up the Athabasca where they pass beneath the river bed. In the vicinity of Pelican Rapids about 80 miles farther south up the Athabasca, wells have penetrated the sands and found them saturated as at the outcrop though apparently much thinner.

Covers Big Area

A point of interest in connection with the general area is that a line drawn through the Pelican wells to the outermost outcrop circumscribes an area of some 10,000 square miles. If the saturation continues west from the outcrop for 50 miles (the distance from the outcrop to the Pelican is 100), the saturated area would cover a total of 100 square miles. In addition to this, should the saturation extend another 20 miles south of Pelican and west from the outcrop more than 80 miles, the area may be increased to 30,000 square miles or even more. It is evident, therefore, that the saturated sands cover an area of at least 10,000 square miles, with the probability of this figure being increased to 30,000 or 50,000.

Out of this vast accumulation of deposit the area in which the sands are at present accessible for mining is probably less than 20 square miles estimated to contain about one billion barrels of oil.

The bituminous sands, as noticed on the face of the cliffs, are from dark brown to black in color. Occasional streaks of bitumen can be seen in some sections of the face where small quantities have come to the surface and slowly worked down and the bedding of the formation is noticeable.

Asphaltic Base

A strong asphaltic [illegible] from the exposed beds. A distinction [illegible] itself between the beds of richly impregnated sands which stand out in bold cliffs and the lean beds and layers of silt and clay which form gentler slopes.

Where the sand is well impregnated the beds form a very compact material. While the surface can be easily picked into with a sharp pointed tool, a heavy blow makes a remarkably small impression. A lump of the deposit after removal is found to be soft, yielding to pressure and breaking down into a disintegrating mass.

On close inspection the product is shown to be an aggregation of fine sand particles each of which is enveloped by a film of a soft, sticky bitumen. The sand is principally composed of quartz with small quantities of mica and other products.

In some of the exposures the saturation is uniform from top to bottom but, generally speaking, the richer beds are at or near the base of the formation. Oil content varies in weight from nothing to 25 per cent with some of the outcrop areas carrying from 100,000 to 125,000 barrels per acre. Others may run even higher.

Of High Quality

With reference to the recovered product in its relationship to the sands, it might be stated that on the basis of 250 tons of sand which has been processed, approximately 175 barrels of crude oil is recoverable, from which 43 per cent of high test gasoline, containing a high octane or anti-knock rating, equal or even superior to processed gasoline, to which ethyl liquid has been added for anti-knock properties, is obtained.

The bituminous sands of McMurray have been estimated by the Dominion Mines Branch to contain 100,000,000,000 barrels of oil. The United States Bureau of Mines places the figure at 250,000,000,000 barrels. The United States Geological Survey has estimated the proven reserves of oil well fields of the world at 24,465,000,000 barrels.

On the assumption of these official estimates an amazing conclusion is drawn to the effect that the bituminous sands area of northern Alberta contains on the first estimate just given an oil content which is equivalent to over four times the quantity of the proven reserves of the world's oil fields, and, on the second estimate, to over ten times that quantity.

Reports Available

S. C. Ells of the Dominion Mines Branch and K. A. Clark of the Research Council of Alberta have over a period of years made extensive studies of these sand exposures and their published reports which are given in interesting and elaborate detail and which contain a wealth of information in maps, topographical sheets, etc., represent a most valuable contribution to scientific research.

Products offered by the bituminous deposits at Athabaska are gasoline, tractor and Diesel fuels and asphalt. In addition to these are by-products which would be in demand by special markets dealing in roofing, paint, battery-insulations and rubber industries.

A great market awaits the Athabaska bituminous sands development in the matter of paving asphalt and road oil.

Alberta alone at the present time has 2,155 miles of gravelled roads for which oil is required, and 20,000 miles of improved roads ready for gravelling and therefore prospective for oil. The neighboring province of Saskatchewan opens up another extensive field in which the demand for this service is greatly felt. In addition to these two provinces the market may be continually enlarged into other areas.

Economic Factors

The product is available and the whole question of its development and distribution must of necessity be governed by economic factors as they exist. Should the demand for asphalt diminish the McMurray development can concentrate on the maximum development of gasoline. As soon as the asphalt markets appear again, the situation can be reversed so as to increase asphalt production and lessen that of gasoline.

To many people who have never visited McMurray there is an extraordinary belief that the town is situated in the Arctic Circle and that winter operations are impossible.

McMurray is 700 miles south of the Arctic Circle and is approximately in the same latitude as the well-known Flin Flon and Sherritt-Gordon mines, at both of which extensive open-pit mining operations are carried on throughout the entire year.

With the exception of stripping of the overburden being impossible in winter, all operations in the McMurray bituminous sands development can be carried on throughout the year. Overburden would be hard to move when frozen and a sufficient quantity would be stripped therefore in the open months and processing operations would continue throughout the winter.

Features

Remarkable features about the asphalt produced at McMurray are its ductility-penetration and ductility-softening point ratios.

Ductility is the distance in which asphalt will stretch without breaking, measured at a certain standard temperature. Penetration is a measure of hardness, the distance that a needle point of a certain size supporting a certain weight will penetrate within a certain time. The smaller the penetration the harder the asphalt. The softening point is the temperature at which the asphalt begins to soften.

The bituminous sands of Athabaska contain the largest known deposit of oil in the world. Their existence in this region has been realized for a very long time. About a century and a half ago—in 1788 to be exact—they were seen and mentioned by Peter Pond. Five years later they were observed by Sir Alexander MacKenzie. Since those far-away dates they have been a subject of interest and discussion, of skepticism and doubt, of optimism and hope. At last the moment of their development has arrived and the truth as to their possibilities is to be discovered.

Profitable Work

With the revelation that on the basis of sound industrial principles they can profitably develop products to compete in quality and quantity with similar products secured from other sources, and with a favorable reaction to present economic problems, the bituminous sands of McMurray will become a name to vie with the famous deposits of Trinidad—an industry of world-wide importance and a possession concerning which the province of Alberta will have every reason to be proud.

Salt in Alberta

The knowledge that Alberta contains great deposits of salt or sodium chloride in the northern part of the province has been generally accepted for years. These deposits exist in the Fort McMurray area at the end of the Northern Alberta Railways' steel.

Some years ago the Alberta Salt Company erected a plant near McMurray for the processing of brine from a well which had been originally drilled for oil. The product obtained was most satisfactory, but transportation difficulties at that time made it impossible to carry on commercially, and after a period of three years' operation the plant was closed.

At a later date arrangements were completed between the Alberta government and a company known as Industrials, Limited for the development of salt at McMurray. A well was drilled by this company at a distance of some 600 feet from the end of steel on the Northern Alberta Railways. Salt was found at 693 feet from the surface and with further drilling the deposit was discovered to have a depth of 199 feet.

This well not only proved a commercial body of salt in the immediate vicinity but also proved the whole area as a definite field, for on different occasions other wells at some distance from the railway had been drilled which were also productive of similar satisfactory results. The new well served to round out the information and establish the fact that Alberta's salt deposits in the immediate neighborhood of a railway were available for exploitation.

The salt area of McMurray is estimated by Dr. J. A. Allan of the University of Alberta to contain at least 500,000 tons to the acre. A conservative estimate states that 30 million tons of salt are contained in this area, which is an amount equal to a 60-year supply for the entire Dominion of Canada at its present rate of consumption. When tested the product gives from 98.27 to 99.57 per cent purity and when powdered the material is paper white in color.

New Use for Salt

Common salt, amongst other usages, is now regarded as an excellent material for road-making when mixed with clay, sand and gravel. The mixture—with the top three inches or more of road—is made on the basis of at least two pounds of salt to the square yard. It is then smoothed and sprinkled enough to dissolve the salt and rolled smooth and hard. As the surface dries it sets and stays hard and rains run off without erosion.

The obvious present market for Alberta salt is within the competitive freight radius of the McMurray field. The prospect for an increase to present development must of necessity await more favorable freight rates in order to reach more distant markets. It must await, also, an increased population and an additional commercial usage for this valuable natural product.

Gypsum

Gypsum has been discovered in three extensive deposits. The largest one is along the sides of Peace River valley below Fort Vermilion and about five miles below Peace Point for a distance of 15 miles. Its extent, lying in beds up to 50 feet in thickness, is estimated to be over one billion tons. Jasper Park, along its northern boundary, and McMurray represent the other two areas containing extensive gypsum deposits.

Little Chicago of the Foothills

Clay Products

From 1906 the clay products of this province have represented an important industry. Alberta's clay resources are known to be varied and extensive and their development holds considerable promise for the future.

The following table, dating from 1930, the year in which the transfer of the natural resources to provincial control was effected, is given:

Conclusion

Until some years after the turn of the present century, Alberta was regarded solely as a haven for the rancher in the south and farmer in the north, the production of coal and structual materials representing the only form of mining industry.

Since then the scene is completely changed. Alberta, today, stands prominently amongst the mining provinces of the Dominion.

Possessing nearly 100 per cent of Canada's oil, the bulk of Canada's natural gas and coal, vast deposits of salt and gypsum and the greatest accumulation of bitumen on earth, the importance of this province in the economic life of the Dominion must stand unchallenged. It has taken a long period of time for all th[illegible] to materialize, but the future exploitation of Alberta's natural wealth on an extensive scale is now assured.

Present industrial progress awaits a great expansion—to be brought into being by the general factors of increased recognition, capital and population—a future which at last appears to be imminent.

DISTRIBUTION OF ROYALTIES GAINS FAVOR

When Turner Valley Royalties No. 1 was completed in June, 1936 a new phase of the oil industry in Alberta commenced. Previous to the completion of this well, the first crude producer in the south-eastern extension of Turner Valley, production in that field had been limited to natural gas and naphtha.

A new phase of the Canadian investment picture also developed—participation in the direct production from crude wells in Turner Valley, through the purchase of royalties. The distribution on these royalties has been growing and gaining in favor, as drilling has enlarged the proven area and revealed that larger production can be expected down the flank of the structure.

There are four main types of royalties dealt in at the present time, gross, net, deferred net, and preferred net.

On the majority of leases in Turner Valley where certain interests have taken a lease from the government, or a sub-lease from companies, and have turned their acreage over to a drilling company, they invariably retain a gross royalty on the acreage as part of the sale price, and it is a gross royalty, which is on the same basis as the government royalty with no deductions from production, which are being offered in Vancouver. There are also available from time to time, gross royalties on the individual wells, usually sold by the drilling company when short of finances.

Investors' returns, as the better producing royalties have been yielding from 1½ to 2½% monthly. These returns should be increased during the summer and fall months, as the field allowable has been increased to 22,500 barrels daily to take care of the first spring demand.

Should Not Use Royal Standard

The Royal standard should not be used by private citizens in their decorations for the visit of the King and Queen. It is the King's flag not one for general use.

It flew over Rideau Hall while Their Majesties were in residence there.

Mining and Fishing

Canada has a possible development of 43,700,000 horsepower in waterpower, but less than 20 per cent of this is being utilized. The last 40 years has seen a spectacular development in mining. Gold production alone has increased 400 per cent in the last 10 years. The Dominion is favored by having the most extensive fishing grounds of any nation in the world, and 70 per cent of the catch is exported. Another great source of revenue in recent years has been from tourists—an average of $235,000,000.

Ottawa Once Bytown

Ottawa, the fine capital of Canada, was once known as "Bytown," named in honor of Colonel By, a distinguished officer of the Royal Engineers who visualized the importance of the place as a future city. He constructed the Rideau Canal before returning ot England.

Turner Valley Output Over Twenty Million Barrels Since 1914

By J. L. IRWIN

Statistician, Department of Lands and Mines, Government of the Province of Alberta

It was stated a year ago that in the world history of oil and its development at the close of 1938 it would be interesting to see the place which would be accorded to Alberta. That statement is now justified. The province's oil activities and development for this year [illegible] questionably spectacular in spite of the drastic proration of [illegible] was enforced to hold the ever increasing production [illegible] and localized market. The production total for the year was [illegible] barrels.

This 1938 total of 6,742,039 [illegible] barrels short of the general prediction that Alberta would reach 7,000,000 comparing rather strikingly, however, with that of 2,793,908 barrels for 1937 and under 1,320,442 for 1936.

The seven million figure would have been passed easily for 1938 but for the additional proration of wells, levied in the last three months of the year as a result of the usual seasonal drop in local demand.

WORLD IMPORTANCE

A production increase over 1937 of approximately 4,000,000 barrels must be regarded as a most satisfactory report of Alberta's progress in 1938 as an oil producing province of world importance.

OPENS NEW AREAS

The most important event of the year, the bringing into production of Home (Millarville) No. 2, materialized toward its close.

The importance of this event is due to the fact of its isolated position from the proven crude oil zone in Southern Turner Valley. Home No. 2 is situated in the extreme north of the field which is approximately two miles northwest of Royalite No. 29, the next most northern crude oil producer in T[illegible] Valley.

This new well is 17 miles to the northwest of the proven crude oil zone in the southern end of the valley.

Its coming into production as a major crude producer opens a new and extensive area in the northern end and greatly enlarges the whole field. With the addition of this new potential area, negotiations are already under way for the drilling of more wells in the vicinity, the locations of which are to range anywhere from 2 to 8 miles to the northwest of Home No. 2.

64 CRUDE WELLS

The development of Okalta No. 6 [illegible] interest. While it is too early yet to make a statement regarding the final stages of this development, it may be said, however, that the drilling of this well, in this isolated location to the west, has now defined how far oil extends down the west flank.

At the close of 1938 there were 64 producing crude wells in Turner Valley, compared with only 35 at the end of 1937. 14 others are drilling and there are plans for starting at least 20 more.

Our Dominion

The area of the Dominion is 3,466,556 square miles, with a water area, exclusive of salt water, of 228,307 square miles. It is the biggest country in the Empire, with its population of 11,200,000 distributed in only four degrees of latitude.

Million Square Miles Of Pre-Cambrian North of Edmonton

Approximately 1,000,000 square miles of the Pre-Cambrian Shield, the reservoir of Canada's great wealth in the precious metals, lies north of the province of Alberta. To this expansive territory Edmonton is the natural gateway, both from its geographical position and to the fact that it is the nearest city to the extensive river system of the Northwestern Territory.

With the advance of the railway to Edmonton in 1891, an overland trail of 100 miles joined Edmonton with this river system and for 40 years Edmonton received the furs of the North and annually sent the merchandise and supplies that represented the equivalent in trade for the furs produced.

Today the railway and boat service of the North is supplemented by the airplane. Some sixty operate out of the Edmonton airport on scheduled and chartered voyages to the 1,569,289 miles and 1,436,283 miles respectively. Since 1929 the freight or express carried has increased from 69,000 lbs. to 3,154,808 lbs. and passengers carried from 640 to 11,337.

Freight by rail and water to and from the North in 1938 reached a total of 72,000,000 lbs., setting a new high record.

The activity indicated by these statistics is due to the rapidly expanding mining industries of that region. The production of gold and other precious metals is keeping at a period in the country's history that corresponds to the day when gold was discovered in the Yukon and everyone hopes it is a prelude to a similar era of economic progress in Western Canada.

The presence of oil at Fort Norman and at the other end of the Central plain on the Turner Valley with favorable indications of that commodity sweeping in a great semi-circle towards the eastern boundary of Alberta between these points, indicates a sanguine geophecy that Alberta contains one of the greatest reservoirs of crude oil in the world.

POSITIVE INTEREST

Positive interest in Northern mining began with Gilbert Labine's examination of the rocks on Great Bear Lake and the discovery of pitchblende, containing a high percentage of radium, which is one of the two precious metals occurring in the element uranium. Following Labine's discovery, a number of prospectors staked claims in the area. The pitchblende also yields an element, silver, uranium, oxide, radio-active lead and polonium.

Gold, of course, is the metal that attracts the prospector and the capitalist—the Witwatersrand and the Klondike bear witness.

The area north of Great Slave Lake has been the scene of the greatest activity in gold production. Gold was found at Outpost Island on Great Slave Lake, in 1934; at Yellowknife arm of the Lake in 1935, and at Gordon Lake, a short distance north of Great Slave Lake, in 1936.

Black Gold

This becoming almost a weekly scene in Turner Valley, Alberta's leading oil field. The picture shows the Davies Pete No. 4 well blowing into production.

In 1938. More than 7,000 claims have been staked since the first rush. The mines—the "Consolidated," and the Negus are in the producing stage. The first has produced to date over $350,000 and the first brick poured by Negus was valued at $30,000. Both companies are enlarging their plants for production commensurate with the content of their properties.

VAST COAL RESOURCES

In addition to oil, Alberta has extensive coal deposits—the largest in Canada—domestic, bituminous, sub-bituminous and anthracite. The Edmonton area is the largest producer in the province of the domestic variety—some 350,000 tons in 1938. A small tonnage of this quantity is shipped to British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. To the west of Edmonton, on the C.N.R. in the Foothills, several sub-bituminous and bituminous mines are located. The trade of these mines in supplies and wages is largely spent in Edmonton, the coal being sold in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba and to the railway system. The total output at Coalspur in 1938 was 350,600 tons; Prairie Creek 104,000 tons; Saunders Creek, 12,000 tons; Mountain Park, 705,000 tons. The total investment in the coal industry for the province is over $40,500,000. The number of men employed throughout the province is as follows:

Sub-bituminous	733
Bituminous	3,098
Total	9,336

Of this number 1,200 are employed in the Edmonton mines. A summary production for the whole province in 1938 is as follows, for comparison:

Domestic coal	1,684,460 tons
Sub-bituminous	373,266 tons
Bituminous	1,862,008 tons
Total	3,919,734 tons

Anthracite 4,200,000 tons in the same period. The development and high freight rates limit the coal business very much.

AGRICULTURE LEADS

Agriculture is the major source of wealth and prosperity for Edmonton and Northern Alberta. The rapid development of the Peace River country, the Mackenzie Belt, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories as developed by Pathfinder, who made a scientific survey of the country in 1938 and 39. Climate and soil are favorable to all manner of agriculture in these districts. Over 62 per cent of the population was north of Red Deer in 1938, and the movement to-cash value of the crops of Northern Alberta is estimated as follows:

Wheat	$45,000,000
Oats	15,000,000
Barley	7,000,000
Rye	500,000
Flax	8,000,000

and further $3,000,000 can be added for potatoes and fodder crops, making a total of $78,500,000.

Livestock forms an important part of farm revenue in the district. Last year over $14,500,000 worth of livestock was marketed in Edmonton. During 1938 there was a steady flow of settlers into the Edmonton and Peace River districts. Over 62 per cent of the population was north of Red Deer in 1938, and the movement towas an increase of 4,250,000 lbs. over 1937. The security of luscious pastures and bountiful supplies of grains and fodder make this industry one of the most stable and profitable in the whole program of agriculture.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

The onset of the drought periods in Southern Alberta about 1920 has sent a lot of farmers from the south into Central and Northern parts of the province. This fact is reflected in the recent Act passed by the Legislative Assembly providing for the settlement of members from 61 to 87 on the lands taking place in the South. There is a steady infiltration of settlers into the Edmonton and Peace River districts. Over 62 per cent of the population was north of Red Deer in 1938, and the movement to-

Canada Today Stands Sixth Among Trading Nations of the World

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier predicted that "The Twentieth Century will be Canada's century," he did not foresee a major world war and an economic depression of greater proportion than any the world has known.

Despite these adverse factors Canada has won and maintained a high place among trading nations and today stands in sixth place in total trade and fourth in point of exports. As an exporting nation Canada, with a foreign export of $1,110,000,000, was exceeded in 1937 only by the United Kingdom, the United States and Germany.

What the future holds for Canadian trade cannot be foretold, but a higher level of prosperity in the United States must be directly reflected in Canada since the conclusion of trade treaties; and indirectly through increased activity in the United Kingdom, which stands second in point of external trade with the Dominion.

"Provided that the thunder clouds on the political horizon can be dissipated without war on a larger scale than now exists," the Hon. W. D. Euler, minister of trade and commerce, said recently, "it is reasonable to expect that 1939 will be a better year for world business and Canadian business than 1938.

"The larger crops and the record production of minerals in 1938 have set the stage for a larger supply of these commodities which constitute Canada's stock in trade."

CANADA BENEFITS

The two trade agreements—one between Canada and the United States and the other between the United Kingdom and the United States—will have tremendous significance on the development and trends of Canadian business. Under these agreements Canada secures benefits of tariff concessions granted by the United States to the United Kingdom, and to other countries, in the part or in the future.

This feature of the agreements which establishes a new relationship between the Dominion and the other two great English-speaking countries will be of increasing importance to Canadian exporters as the U.S. trade agreement program develops and expands.

In the past it has been a generally regarded fact that Canada as a unit has been the world's largest basket of the Empire's surplus products. Canada has always been a heavy exporter of wheat in most years. Other exports were mainly those of agricultural products, minerals, forest products and fish.

Prairie Provinces Dominate

Despite Rapid Development

Elsewhere

Total

Manufacturing is showing a revival from the depression of 1933, not only in Edmonton, but throughout the province. Edmonton is the province's manufacturing city on the prairies, showed increases. Nickel recorded decades, but is no longer a fact. The self-sufficiency programs of many European nations have increased their grain productions to a point where they are no longer wholly dependent upon imports.

CROPS INCREASE

World wheat crops, excluding China and Russia, are estimated at 4,393,000,000 bushels for 1938—a gain of 349,000,000 bushels over 1937. The Canadian crop alone, estimated at 348,000,000 bushels, was 90 per cent greater than the crop of 1937.

This self-sufficiency policy will probably be continued as long as it is economically possible to maintain it and the result will inevitably tend to decrease world wheat purchases from exporting countries.

However, the agricultural industry, from which one-third of the people of Canada derive their sole income, is still a vast enterprise. It accounted for $1,070,000,000 in gross production in 1936 alone and was second only to manufacturing, which produced a gross wealth of $3,002,463,000 (a net wealth of $1,289,592,000).

It is evident that Canada, depending so largely upon international commerce, must maintain a close watch upon world trends in economics and politics. In 1938 this was demonstrated by the general decline in trade due to disturbing political and economic factors.

DISTURBING FACTORS

The war in the Far East, disturbances in the Balkans, unrest in France, political rivalries between France and Italy in the Mediterranean and the ambitions of Nazi Germany contributed a great deal to a recession of general international trade in 1938. This is inevitable since production and trade depend almost wholly upon anticipations of future needs—and in 1938 business men were reluctant to make any future commitments.

From October, 1937, to October, 1938, the British index of wholesale prices declined from 1106 to 96 [illegible] drop of over 10 per cent. World trade measured in terms of the old gold dollar value, dropped 12.5 per cent in the same period.

During the same period, however, there were many bright spots in the Canadian industrial picture. Most notable of these is the mining industry which advanced throughout the Dominion to new peaks of production and employment. New gold moved in 1938 had a value of $160,000,000, the highest on record, while copper, lead and zinc also only a slight decline from the satisfactory figures of 1937.

REVENUES DECLINE

Revenue receipts for the Dominion in 1938 showed $338,408,000 for the first eight months, about $2,000,000 below the same period of the preceding year while interest payments declined by more than $3,500,000 in that time below the 1937 figures due to the better terms upon which the Canadian national debt is being financed.

In aggregate wealth British Columbia ranged fourth in the Dominion and is first by a wide margin in per capita wealth, at $3,414; Alberta is second with $2,689 and Saskatchewan third with $2,657. In per capita production British Columbia is second only to Ontario with a net commodity production of $283 per person.

This huge per capita wealth of B.C. is due, in a large part, to the healthy state of her export industries, which continue to more than offset the adverse trade balance the province suffers with the rest of Canada. The aggressiveness of her business men in seeking and exploring foreign markets and in adjusting their export industries to comply with such market regulations and requirements is one of the greatest of recent commercial achievements.

NET INCREASE

In the face of declining world trade and general uneasiness in foreign markets British Columbia has shown a net increase of $24,635,032 in external trade in 1937, with a favorable trade balance (domestic and foreign) of $44,230,739.

Canada, and British Columbia in particular, stands ready to benefit by any sign of stability in world political and economic affairs. In the meanwhile, the general picture is somewhat hazy as European trade policies continue to be subordinated to political and non-commercial factors that time alone will straighten out.

Great Destiny

Canada is still a nation in the early stages of development, destined by size and resources to become one of the world's great nations. Its story is a romantic and colorful one, beginning with the struggle between England and France for the mastery of half a continent, with Britain finally achieving victory in 1759. Exploration and pioneering has given way to industry and progress. The population is steadily increasing, but only at a rate at which new settlers can be absorbed.

OTHER FIELDS IN ALBERTA ARE TESTED

Extensive Work Is Being Carried Out In Many Areas

By JOHN L. IRWIN
Statistician, Alberta Dept. of Lands and Mines

In addition to the encouraging record established by the Turner Valley Field during 1938 is that of other oil areas throughout the province. Some have already developed production, whilst others with the drilling of most interesting tests, hope to reach the same goal.

The Ribstone area, 30 miles south east of Wainwright, is carrying out an interesting test and at a depth of approximately 2,000 feet oil occurrences have come into evidence. North Tober Royalties No. 1 well, 30 miles east of Lethbridge, also is attracting attention. The drilling test in this area has passed a number of gas sands which have proved encouraging.

The Rum River well, approximately 100 miles west of Red Deer, was spudded in on October 24th, and by January 16th had reached a depth of over 700 feet. The Devonian limestone was encountered at the 70 foot level when casing was set. At 300 feet came the first evidence of gas, and a core sample, taken from the 400 foot level, showed a noticeable impregnation of oil, the cores at greater depth showing increased evidence of oil together with porosity. The test is being watched with the greatest of interest.

DEVELOPMENT WORK

Development work in the other fields throughout the province includes the Alhoa well on the Clearwater River, 20 miles to the southeast of the Ram River well; the Pouce Coupe wells near the Alberta British Columbia boundary in the Peace River country; the Home-Brazeau well in the Brazeau area; the tests at Lloydminster on the Saskatchewan border; the test at Steveville, 70 miles northwest of Medicine Hat; Moose Dome, 50 miles west of Calgary; two wells near Lundbreck in the Crow's Nest Pass area; the test of Castle River and Sevarnun Creek in the southwest of the province; and Milk River and Del Bonita in the international boundary area.

Canada's Largest Independent Crude Oil Producing Organization

Actively Operating in the Turner Valley and Steveville Fields and Also on Various Important Outside Structures

The Anglo-Canadian Oil Company Limited, and its subsidiary and associated companies, have 13 producing wells in the Turner Valley field with a present aggregate daily allowable of 4,272 barrels (May 23, 1939).

The Anglo-Canadian Oil Company Limited is itself drilling 5 more wells in the heart of the Turner Valley Field, and is interested in the drilling of several others on outside structures.

The Anglo-Canadian Oil Company Limited, through its wholly owned subsidiary, Anglo-Canadian Oils Limited, operates a modern refinery at Brandon, Manitoba. The capacity of this plant has been considerably increased through the installation of a modern Dubbs cracking unit. This refinery uses Turner Valley crude exclusively, and has obtained a license from the Ethyl Corporation. Products, under Anglo-Canadian brands, are distributed throughout Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan.

A Few Interesting Items From The Company's Annual Report

Aggregate Oil Production to January 31, 1939, 1,572,893 bbls.
(from the Group's 13 wells, which were producing from one to twenty-six months)

Value of Aggregate Production	$2,034,017.03	Wages for the year ending Jan. 31, 1939	$330,000.00
Gross Royalties Paid	$470,136.58	Average Number of Employees	250
Disbursements to Shareholders of various Associated Companies	$654,232.30	Materials Purchased during the year ending Jan. 31, 1939	$1,590,000.00

These figures show that Anglo-Canadian Oil Co., Ltd., is contributing in a very substantial way to the general welfare of Alberta and to the development of the Natural Resources of this Province

Industrial Alberta Shows Great Manufacturing Strides in Recent Years

Expansion Values Of Alberta-Made Products Enormous

In Thirty-four Years Net Increase Has Been $70,000,000—Now 905 Manufacturing Establishments Here

By T. ASHENHURST
Secretary, Alberta Branch
Canadian Manufacturers' Association

With the coming of Our Gracious Sovereigns to our Province this month, its name "Alberta" takes on a deeper significance, having been called after Her Royal Highness, Princess Louise Caroline Alberta, wife of the Marquis of Lorne, later the Duke of Argyle. The latter, it is interesting to note, was at that time also Governor-General of Canada, from 1878 to 1883, and he named the Province himself

T. ASHENHURST
Secretary of the Alberta Branch Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who contributed article published on this page.

Alberta was organized as one of the Provinces of Canada in the year 1905, along with the Province of Saskatchewan, from territory formerly included in the North West Territories.

At that time there were only approximately 97 establishments in the whole province, with a production value of around $5,000,000. In 34 short years manufacturing production in Alberta has multiplied nearly the above figures to a gross value totaling $70,000,000.

Alberta for some years has been attracting eastern and other industrial interest, which realize that the increasing population, the development of the natural resources and the industrial opportunities which of recent years are so apparent in the whole province, are beginning to find for the investment of their money in the purchase of the products.

The Alberta Directory, comprising manufacturers for 1939, which contains the latest official figures available, shows that in 1938 there were 905 establishments in Alberta.

Gross Value

These establishments reported a gross value of production of $74,052,010, a capital investment in fixed and current assets of $50,214,976, and a payroll of 11,756 persons who received $12,008,477 as salaries and wages. They also spent $47,684,039 for materials and $1,360,540 for fuel and electricity, leaving $25,660,000 as the value added by manufacture.

The level of manufacturing in Canada's chief province is much higher than in the Province of Alberta. Compared with 1905 there were increases of $62,214,062 in the gross value of production, 727 or 66 per cent in the number of employees and $14,008,796 or 94 per cent in the salaries and wages paid, and also $1,230,540, or 5.2 per cent in the value added by manufacture. The capital invested was $4,166,976 higher. Current assets increased by $3,212,641. While fixed assets were down by $99,000, due mainly to charges for depreciation.

Manufactures based on animal products, with a value of production of $25,444,497, formed the most important group in 1938. The second group of manufactures based on vegetable products, with an output valued at $24,474,660. The metallic mineral products group came third with a production of $9,516,534, followed by wood and paper products with $7,259,568, and iron and steel products $4,282,106 etc.

Meat Packing

Slaughtering and meat packing, with an output valued at $17,661,494, was again the leading industry of the province. This was followed by flour and feed mills with $12,261,814, poultry products $7,410,882, butter and cheese $7,337,840, etc. Sugar refining is also a leading industry in Alberta. Were official statistics are not available, as there are only two plants reporting. It is noteworthy that last season a total of 800,000 bags of sugar, valued at $4,000,000, were turned out. From the point of view of production, the city of Calgary, with an output valued at $27,667,121, was of major importance. Edmonton came next with an output of $18,262,664. The combined output of these two cities amounted to 68 per cent of the provincial total. Medicine Hat and Lethbridge followed in the order named.

Principal manufacturing statistics for the Province of Alberta are given in the following tables published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which can be secured by anyone interested direct from the bureau.

The following tables are available:

1. Statistical comparison of manufacturing industries in Alberta for years 1905 and 1936.
2. Principal statistics of manufacturing industries in Alberta, 1929 to 1936.
3. Principal statistics by groups of industries for the Province of Alberta, 1935 and 1936.
4. Principal statistics of the industries in each group, Province of Alberta, 1936.
5. Principal statistics of industries in each group, 1936, concluded.
6. Principal statistics of leading industries, 1936.
7. Manufacturing industries of Alberta, 1936, (cities, towns and villages in Alberta having three or more establishments, 1936).
8. Capital invested in the manufacturing enterprises in the Province of Alberta, 1936, and totals for representative years, 1925-1935.

What It Shows

A report recently issued by the department of trade and industry for Alberta government on "Alberta's Industrial Development" shows in part as follows:

"At present there are approximately 1,000 manufacturing industries in Alberta with a capital investment of $96,000,000, employing 12,000 persons, a payroll of over $12,000,000 and a total valuation of $80,000,000 in goods manufactured.

"The manufacturing industries of Alberta which are most successful are those which have been established from the native raw material of the province. Chief amongst these are the flour and feed mills, bread, biscuits, candy and bakery products, cereal products and breweries from wheat and other grains, sugar factories from sugar beets, and canning factories from vegetables.

"Slaughtering and meat packing plants, creameries and cheese factories, tanneries, hides, leather and fur goods from animal products, and sawmills, planing mills, box, sash and door factories, and furniture from forestry products.

"There are also clay products such as earthenware, and glass, lime, petroleum products, stone monumental and ornamental; soaps and washing compounds, from other natural products.

"In addition to the above there are many industries which import raw materials, process these in the province, and offer for sale, goods which are equal or better to those manufactured outside the province. These goods are represented in the clothing industry, automobile supplies, castings and forgings, machinery and agricultural implements, sheet metal products, electrical apparatus and supplies, aerated and mineral waters, and miscellaneous chemical products.

Vegetable Products

The province of Alberta can produce the finest wheat grown in the world. This is universally acknowledged, for has not the international championship been won many times by farmers of this province.

Out of these finest hard wheats are produced many brands of flour of high quality.

Biscuit Factories—There are two biscuit factories in the province, one in Calgary, and one in Edmonton, the Calgary plant being the larger in plant and equipment. Both plants turn out a high grade of biscuit which is meeting with strong consumer support. The biscuit industry is important not only in itself, but because of the large amount of materials produced in the province which find an outlet through this industry, viz., flour, sugar, butter, eggs, cream, lard, as well as fruits, jams, cartonnage, etc.

Flour Mills and Bakeries—The flour mills in the province, over 30 in number, with a capitalization of $10,000,000, make a valuable contribution to the biscuit industry, and also to the bakery industry which in turn numbers over 150 establishments, with a capitalization of close to $3,000,000. Alberta-made bread, pure, wholesome and milk in powder content, is one of the best bread building products to be found anywhere in the world.

Cereals—Then for breakfast cereals such as "Sunny Boy," "Breakfast," "Cottage Maid," "Eat Rite," "Smiles," "Wheat Growers," "Wheat Hearties," "Oster Puffs," "Sunburst," etc. there are plants at Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Camrose, D'Arcy Stettler etc. Alberta cereals are pre-eminence, and like the Alberta-made bread. They have enjoyed increasing popularity. These products are offered for sale in most attractive packages and containers. Start the day right by using Alberta-manufactured cereals.

Sugar Beets and Sugar — In the southern part of the province contiguous to Raymond, Lethbridge and Picture Butte, there are 20,000 acres planted in sugar beets annually. In the year 1938, 281,000 tons of beets were harvested, an average yield of 12.74 tons per acre. About 130,000 tons were processed at the Raymond factory and 121,000 tons at the new factory in Picture Butte. The sugar produced amounted to over 78,000,000 pounds, which is sufficient to supply the needs of the people of Alberta and nearly half the needs of the people of Saskatchewan. The company has paid over $1,600,000 to about 1,000 growers and in addition they paid over $1,000,000 for freight, materials for manufacture and salaries and wages.

Alberta sugar is equal to any imported sugar for every household use, including preserving, and it is sold for a reasonable price. There is therefore every reason for consumers to order only "Pure Alberta Sugar."

Sugar Beets By-Products — The by-products of sugar beets, viz., beet pulp and beetshaed is fattening to 70,000 tons annually, are rapidly finding favor with the stock growers of Alberta.

Candy—There are several important candy manufacturing establishments in various parts of the province, all of which are enjoying popular favor, because of the high quality of goods produced. It is interesting to note that the consumption of candy in the province is in excess of eight million pounds per year, so that this industry is of real importance to the farmer and grower of sugar beets. It is important also from the standpoint of actual labor.

Linseed Oil and Oil Cake — At Medicine Hat there is an up-to-date factory for the manufacturing of linseed oil and oil cake. The products are manufactured largely from raw materials found in the south of the province and the support of this important industry should be forthcoming from the people of Alberta. When painting, use Alberta linseed oil; you will like it.

Canned Fruits and Vegetables—Many people have often asked: Why can't we capitalize on the bountiful crops of small fruits and vegetables, and manufacture as good, if not better products than those which are imported? There is one fully equipped plant operating along these lines at Taber, and there are other establishments which do preserving for local needs in a small way. There is here an ample opportunity to support local products by buying only Alberta-made goods.

Tea, Coffee and Spices—There are two plants for packing one in Calgary and one in Edmonton employing approximately 100 people. The highest quality of raw materials are used and only that pliable medium is employed in order to preserve ground and packed our factories are able to fill this demand to the utmost satisfaction.

Animal Products

Butter and Cheese—The dairying industry is one of the most important in the agricultural life of Alberta. There is nothing more welcome to the farmer than the monthly cheque for milk supplied to the creameries and cheese factories. This cheque forms a most commodity through the year, and channels of trade and in this respect a great opportunity is made to the general prosperity of the province. There were 95 creameries and 44 cheese factories in the year 1938 and there are 9,000,000 pounds of butter and 2,450,000 pounds of cheese produced respectively.

Alberta butter stands ace-high in quality, and this has been attained over a series of years by the government system of grading. Last year the winning at various exhibitions throughout the province and many valuable prizes, and it is therefore not surprising that local demand for Alberta-made butter has reached unprecedented proportions.

Local merchants are convinced that Alberta cheese is the finest on the market. The consumption of cheese annually is in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 pounds, and there is there is no reason why Alberta cheese in attractive packages containing the normal high quality of manufacture should not be as acceptable to the Alberta householder as that which is imported.

If there is teamwork between the producer and the consumer, good results will follow. If there is a confidence and spirit of co-operation between the producers, the graders, and buyers and the retailers, Alberta products can be properly made and successfully merchandised.

Canned Milk—The Alberta Milk Condensery in Red Deer operating for a year or so has demonstrated what can be done in the utilization of our great milk supply. Drawing from a large territory in the centre of the province, this plant has broken into the Alberta market in no uncertain way, and with continued support, there is every reason to assume that Alberta canned milk will find its way to the table of every householder in the province.

Honey—There is nothing so luscious as Alberta honey. Last year there were nearly 2,500,000 pounds produced from 15,000 colonies. Engaged in this industry are over 1,500 beekeepers. These beekeepers work under government supervision and instruction and the quality of the product has been so high that many consumers outside the province have given Alberta honey the preference. This is one of the best-paying propositions in diversified farming and is worthy of whole-hearted local patronage.

Meat Packing Plants—Of all the animals slaughtered and sold in the province, two-thirds found their way to the slaughtering and meat packing plants, of which there are over 11 in number. There are nearly $10,000,000 invested in industry, and the excellence of these plants on a paying basis is vital to the interests of our farmers. We wonder if the average householder realizes to its fullest extent that when Alberta meat is purchased, some farmer is placed in a better position to buy other household necessities. The animals slaughtered in the packing plants reach the consumer in the form of beef, mutton and lamb, pork, veal, fancy meats and offal, canned meats, sausages, soups, shortening, tallow, lard, cracklings, tankage, fertilizers, hair, etc. The products of these plants feed a great number of people all over Alberta and the western provinces, and constitute the major manufacturing industry in the province of Alberta.

Tanneries — When animals are killed, most of these hides can be utilized for some purpose, for example:

Cow hides, for harness, shoe uppers, leather, fancies, strap work, driving gloves, etc.

Sheep hides, for leather, garments, gloves, etc.

The hairs of cow hides are made into valuable brushes.

The commercial use of calf skins is the finest and best for leather.

It is possible to make much finer leather than is now being made in Alberta and this requirement for any more detailed knowledge in the tanning of commercial leather will be dealt with in a later article.

Support your local tanneries and the firms who sell its products.

Overalls and Work Clothes—One of the largest factories for the manufacture of overalls and work clothes in the British Empire is situated in Edmonton. There are four other factories in various parts of the province all turning out high grade products which have the confidence of the public, yet in spite of this we import over two-thirds of our requirements and employ 1,200 people outside the province to make these goods for us. The development of this industry to its fullest extent would give added assurance of a market for the product of a woollen mill, and would be of great assistance to many other industries in the province.

Textile Products

Hosiery and Knit Goods—Some of the finest woollen socks and stockings are produced in Alberta. The two most important knitting factories are in Calgary and Lethbridge. These factories use a great deal of yarn spun from Alberta grown wool, and are becoming an important factor in stabilizing the price of wool.

The prospect of establishing woollen mills in the province has been engaging the attention of the people of Alberta for some time, and in this connection much interest has been created, especially in the district of Magrath.

Men's Felt Hats—These are being made successfully in the city of Calgary, and the quality of goods turned out is meeting a ready sale with discriminating buyers.

Women's Dresses—In the past year there were distributed nearly 300,000 dresses of a class or kind similar in price to that of the dresses made in Alberta factories, in Calgary, and practically the same number were distributed in Edmonton. If only 10 per cent of the distribution in Calgary and Edmonton were made in Alberta factories, over 200 additional girls could be employed.

Wood and Paper

Boxes—Nearly all industries require boxes or cartons in which to pack their wares, and to meet these needs, the cities of Calgary and Edmonton have very reliable firms who make a specialty of this class of work. Their factories are up-to-date workmanship is excellent and every courtesy is extended to their customers.

Furniture—There are several concerns in Alberta making high class furniture. Chesterfield suites, mattresses, comforters, pillows, refrigerators, show cases and office furniture. Large quantities of native birch are used, but in this case also the bulk of the consumption comes from outside, as there are comparatively few people employed in Alberta factories making this class of goods.

Planing Mills and Sawmills — When Alberta lumber is properly seasoned, it is invaluable for building purposes. Sawmills numbering 200 in operation [illegible] employing [illegible] first class building [illegible] from [illegible] Spruce [illegible] and Douglas Fir [illegible] is a growing demand for Alberta shingles, and when treated these make a roof that is destined to last for many years.

The products of sash, door and planing mills are very popular for use in construction, and many firms in the province are well equipped to supply the demand.

Miscellaneous—A number of firms engaged in making artificial limbs, boat building, brushes, carriages, wagons and sleighs, coffins and caskets, excelsior, wood preserving and asbestos products are worthy of the patronage of all Alberta citizens.

If you wish to make your house warm in winter and cool in the summer, use material such as moss ex or shavings from Alberta plants.

Iron and Steel

Automobile Springs, Tops—It is surprising to note the many firms which are engaged in these industries, and the advance may be ascribed to the mechanization and the mode of travel of the present age.

Castings and Forgings — Sheet metal products, furnaces, stokers, heaters, acetylene generators, gas appliances, wire fencing and wire, structural steel welding equipment and railway rolling stock.

For a country so young as Alberta, there have been great strides made to meet the demands of modern industry, and the firms engaged in this work have performed some very difficult tasks to the entire satisfaction of those concerned.

Armature Winding—In this connection one firm located in Calgary is the only plant in western Canada that can do armature winding by machinery.

Aerated Waters

Soft Drinks, Ciders, etc. — The firms engaged in this industry have placed on the market, products that are very commendable and in the summer season especially, they are in great demand.

Clay Products

Brick and Tile—Many firms in this industry are making a very fine contribution to the construction industry and their product is standing up under the stress and strain of our rigorous climate.

Potteries—In Medicine Hat and Redcliff there are a number of plants. These are capable of turning out articles from the largest drain tiles to the smallest Brown Betty teapots. The kilns for baking these products are all equipped to burn natural gas which is abundant in that part of Alberta. Medicine Hat is one of the most important shipping centres in Canada for stoneware and pottery, while Redcliff is noted for its glass works—a branch of one of the important eastern concerns. In this plant, milk bottles, lamp chimneys, etc. are made. This is another industry which could be greatly developed if the people of Alberta insisted on buying local instead of imported products.

Cement Products

One plant in the south of the province at Exshaw is engaged exclusively in the manufacture of cement and others supply the cement products such as ready mixed concrete, concrete pipe for culverts, drains, etc. and fireproof pipe, which have met with much public approval.

There are also plants for the manufacture of lime, plaster and stucco in the province.

During the past few years renewed interest has been taken in the province of Alberta as a field for the establishment of new industries, and is an indication of how Alberta is regarded as a profitable field for investments.

The following are some of the principal industries located here during the past few years:

A new million dollar slaughtering and meat packing plant in Edmonton, established by Canada Packers, Limited, and a small plant for custom killing by Edmonton Packers, Limited.

A new sugar factory at Picture Butte by Canadian Sugar Factories, Limited, Raymond, which processed 121,000 tons of sugar beets in the year 1938.

A new milk condensery in Red Deer by the Central Alberta Dairy Pool which already has made notable [illegible] able progress in the supplying of a very high quality of evaporated milk to Alberta consumers at a lower price than that formerly charged by importers.

A new cheese factory at Ryley by Woodland Dairy Limited.

New Oil Refineries

Hubalta, Calgary, by Monarch Refineries Limited; Hartell by British American Oil Refineries; Edmonton by Triploil Refineries; Lethbridge, by Huff Refineries Limited; Lloydminster, by Dina Oil & Refining Co. Ltd.; Wainwright, by L. H. Meikle-John; Red Deer, Hydro Petroleum Refineries.

Reports to hand indicate the possibility of three new oil refineries in Calgary, and one in Edmonton being established in the near future.

A new garment factory for the manufacture of knitted ladies' sport suits and dresses at Lethbridge by the Logan Garment Co. Ltd.

The project of establishing woollen mills in this province also has been engaging the attention of our people for some time.

Other New Plants

New charcoal plants have been established at Norbuck by Empire Charcoal company, with headquarters at Edmonton, and at Slave Lake by A. Montgomery.

A new $100,000 plant has been erected for the manufacture of stoneware and pottery at Medicine Hat.

Developments are also expected in the manufacture of carbon black. This will help to utilize the great surplus of natural gas.

Salt

For over 10 years, no production of salt was registered in the province. In 1936, the Industrial Minerals Limited was formed for the purpose of developing this industry and one of the first steps was the construction of an evaporation plant at Waterways.

The production in 1938 was slowed up somewhat, owing to unforeseen difficulties, but at present this plant is supplying nearly all the packers with their entire requirements of coarse salt, and are also shipping a certain amount through the wholesalers for distribution to the farm trade.

At the present time, only two grades of coarse salt and iodized coarse salt are manufactured, but plans are under way for the processing of various grades of salt and also for the further extension of this industry during the present year.

In the year 1938 the production of salt was 3,000 tons which were marketed at approximately $39,950.

Tar Sands

There are from 10,000 to 50,000 square miles of tar sands in the vicinity of Fort McMurray and Waterways in the province awaiting development. Up to the present, three companies with a capitalization of nearly $6,000,000 have erected plants, some of which include refineries. In every enterprise of this nature, there are initial problems to overcome, but it is expected that next year these firms will enter production on a large scale. In preparation for this one firm this year installed a "new toll" for the distribution of oil.

The sands have proved very valuable for road construction, and they also serve as a source of pure bitumen for use in floorings, foundations, insulation of pipes, etc.

Light distillate oils extracted from the sands are used for paint thinner along with the pure asphalt for the manufacture of paints with an asphalt base. In addition to the pure asphalt and the light distillates, there can be manufactured light and heavy diesel oils and a heavy fuel oil. There is also a possibility that oil sands may prove of invaluable assistance to the rapidly expanding commercial flying activity of the far north, especially if there is an assurance of high quality anti-knock gasoline being derived from the extracted oil.

During the year, one plant made some shipments of oil for experimental purposes, one shipment going as far north as Goldfields, and a car of asphalt for roofing purposes was shipped to Crown Point, Indiana. This plant also produced four carloads of asphaltum for use in the province.

Development

The following firms are engaged in the development of tar sands:

International Bitumen Co. Ltd.
Abasand Oils Limited.
McMurray Asphaltum Oils Ltd.

Construction

It is not fully realized the great progress which the construction industry has made in Alberta, nor the amount of building which has been carried on. In the year 1937, $1,000,000 in loans were granted to residents of Alberta under the Canadian Home Improvement act, and in the year 1938, $900,000 were granted for the same purpose.

New construction involving a heavy outlay was either undertaken or contemplated by the following in the year 1938:

New Oil Refinery

In addition to new construction referred to above undertaken last year, considerable additions are being made to several plants in the province, the largest being the construction of a $1,700,000 combination refining and cracking coil unit being built at Calgary for the Imperial Oil Company Limited. It is expected that this new unit will be in operation by the end of this year.

Oil Expansion

An outstanding event during last year in the development of natural resources was the expansion of Alberta oil fields. The estimate of the province's present production of oil is in the neighborhood of 40,000 barrels a day, or 14,600,000 barrels a year. Alberta's percentage of Canada's total in 1938 was 97.00. Apart from her supplies of crude oil, Alberta has large potential resources of petroleum in her deposits of bituminous sands and oil shales.

The bituminous deposits at McMurray in northern Alberta, it should be noted, cover an area of at least 1,500 square miles. This material is excellent for paving or the hard-surfacing of highways. A satisfactory process for the extraction of the bitumen as a heavy crude oil has been worked out, and Hon. Mr. Chevrier, minister of mines and resources, in a recent radio address, stated that there is no doubt that the deposits represent one of the largest known potential oil reserves in the world. There can be no doubt that Alberta has huge opportunities for development of her natural resources through systematic scientific production and treatment of her products.

Mine Development

There has been a rapid extension of late of the interest aroused by the mining development under way in the country between Edmonton and the Arctic. No doubt exists now of its vast importance from a national standpoint. Opinion freely expressed amongst northern mining circles show that even greater mining activity is expected in the north during the present year.

These and other new developments have found quick reflection in Alberta's business activity. New refineries and pipe lines representing a capital expenditure of more than $4,000,000 are either planned or under construction, many millions more have been invested in bringing Turner Valley's 51 crude oil wells into production.

The widening scope of Alberta's natural resources, including her enormous coal reserves, provides a solid foundation for her industrial progress. Once her harvest was grain alone—now that harvest is broadening in scope to give more work and wealth to Canada and Canadians.

Balanced Economy

It will be seen from the above that Alberta is rapidly achieving a more balanced economy. We still are and probably for some time to come, will be largely dependent on wheat and other grain growing for an important part of our income, but the lessons of the past few years tell us that it is most desirable not to have too many eggs in one basket.

We ought, therefore, to be glad that we are becoming more versatile in our production, and I believe that this movement is reaching proportions the importance of which the general public does not fully appreciate.

The process of change in our provincial economy reveals itself in four ways, as follows:

1. Changes in agricultural methods, including finishing of live stock.

2. Greater diversification in general manufacturing.

3. Development of mineral resources.

4. Development of petroleum resources.

The substantial industrial growth in Alberta we can all agree is an excellent thing. Under any circumstances it would be welcome. However, coming at a time when our major agricultural industry of grain growing is suffering from world conditions, it is doubly important.

That is the picture in Alberta, and so long as we continue to remain steadfast in our purpose to help build a strong, virile province and a united Canada, we shall not have failed.

Famed Tar Sands

The tar sands of Fort McMurray have long been noted as one of Alberta's outstanding natural resources, which only lack of transportation facilities have kept from full development. Now Abasand Oils Ltd., with its refining plant on the Horse River, near McMurray, is rapidly bringing commercial development to this great natural resource.

Nine Provinces

The diversification of each of the nine provinces of the Dominion is most marked. Prince Edward Island ranks with any of the others in beauty; Nova Scotia is the land of romance; New Brunswick, rolling hills and fertile valleys; Quebec, a mixture of quaintness, beauty and modernity; Ontario, the heart of Canada and the industrial centre; Manitoba, diversified in scenery and trade; Saskatchewan, the granary of the Empire; Alberta has its grandeur of national parks; and British Columbia its sea and

WHY MINING IS IMPORTANT

Here is why the mining industry is playing such a prominent role in Canada. Dividends from mines last year for all Canada totalled $93,821,715. Since records were first kept, B.C.'s dividend payments by mines amount to $115,232,484.

The following table shows total value of dividends for 1938 and the total for all time for the main producing mines in the various provinces:

Sunny Alberta Is Described as Brightest Jewel in the British Crown

Province Holds Out Great Possibilities Of a Rich Territory

Within Borders Are Resources For Extensive Industrialization And Agricultural Economy Side By Side

By L. D. BYRNE

Alberta has been described as the brightest jewel in the British Crown—and rightly so. There is probably no part of the earth's surface of the same area which holds out greater possibilities for future development than does this province with the rich territory to the north that, one day, will be included within Alberta's boundaries.

L. D. BYRNE

Economic progress is dependent upon the means available to a people for the production of goods and services to satisfy their wants. Within the borders of Alberta are the resources for extensive industrialization of the province and a well-planned agricultural economy existing side by side with this.

Production is dependent upon the available resources of energy, the available reserves of raw material, and the knowledge of how to convert the latter into wanted goods and services by the application of the former.

The essential feature of modern production methods is the rapid progress which has been made and continues to be made in the harnessing and application of solar energy stored in coal, oil and so forth, to machinery. Recognition of this fact provides a staggering picture of the potentialities of Alberta's future—with her enormous reserves of coal, oil, natural gas and available metal deposits.

Advantage

But there is another great advantage which Alberta enjoys. Highly industrialized areas suffer the handicap of having industries which have been established for many years, and consequently these cannot readily keep pace with the spectacular progress which has been made, and continues to be made, in the spheres of invention and improvements in processes.

A comparatively undeveloped area, therefore, starts with an advantage, for it benefits to a maximum from the cultural heritage so laboriously built up from experience by more developed countries.

So much for the physical possibilities of Alberta's future.

What of the handicaps?

In spite of the experience in the United States so close at hand, the story of the development of the West to date has not been a happy one, because of the lack of there ever being any plans of settlement and development, entire areas which were unsuitable for cultivation were opened and cultivated; and consequently they have been reduced to deserts. Then again, the policy of the earlier settlers "to make good" resulted in a "take all you can today and never mind tomorrow" policy. The land was cleared of all trees. There was apparently no guiding hand to point out that if nature's protection from the wind was entirely destroyed, the resulting loss of top soil from blowing would cause irreparable havoc to the rich producing qualities of the land. Nor did it seem so obvious then, as today, that you cannot disturb the balance of nature and make no counter adjustments without paying a heavy penalty. So the beaver were killed for their fur. And the dams of these natural engineers gradually disappeared. No reservoirs were built and the life-giving waters were not held in check. They poured freely out of the bare, whether plant and animal life depended upon the conservation of the water resources which the forests had previously provided. And so drought and forest fires took their toll of the wealth which should have been conserved.

Warning Is Plain

It is surprising that the vast waste lands and receding waters of the country do not yet appear to have electrified the West into action. The warning is all too plain. If vigorous action is not taken within a reasonably short time, extensive areas of Western Canada—and this applies to the northern areas in this province—will be desert wastes.

In Alberta at least the serious nature of this question is realized and a definite start has been made with most encouraging results. In spite of this, there is still an urgent need for a properly co-ordinated scheme of conservation by all the provinces. And this is bound up with the future development of the West.

Handicaps

With the knowledge we have, and with the resources at our disposal, the stage should be set for a period of tremendous development combined with the introduction of a properly organized scheme of conservation. Abundance is knocking at the door. The opportunities seem almost limitless.

Is this to be? Strangely enough, the answer to this question is not dependent upon the realities of the situation and the physical possibilities open to the province and the nation. It is dependent entirely upon the ability of the people to overcome the abstract difficulties which bar the way.

Let us consider one of these difficulties. The dominant problem in the West is that of debt. Debt is entirely a product of the financial system. And the financial system is basically a system of accountancy. Its purpose is to keep a record of economic activity and transactions—for which purpose a money is the mechanism which we call money is used.

Dominant Problem

Debt is an obligation to pay money. And the only manner in which a person can secure money under the present system is to exchange his produce or services for it. So, in the last resort, debt is an obligation by a debtor to transfer to creditors goods and services of an unspecified amount to be determined by the amount of money for which they can be exchanged.

This may appear to be laboring the point; but it is not. Its significance becomes obvious when we realize that the amount of goods and services with which a debtor has to part is dependent upon the amount of money available to buy the total production. Price, the link between money and goods, determines the amount of debt in terms of goods and services. If money is scarce and goods are plentiful, prices are low and more goods are required to meet a fixed amount of debt than if both money and goods were plentiful and prices were high.

Strangely enough, under the system as it operates, the amount of money available and the prices of goods is not dependent upon production. Production and prices are both dependent upon the amount of money. And the money business, which we must bear in mind should be essentially a bookkeeping system, is something apart from the productive system. In fact, it is not even under the control of the people. The business of manufacturing money and issuing it has become the most lucrative and powerful business in the world, for it controls all activity.

West In Bondage

This becomes apparent when we find that the money business is under the control of a highly centralized monopoly. The power of this monopoly exists in its ability to increase or decrease the amount of money available at will, and to issue money only as a debt which must be repaid. Moreover, the monopolists are not responsible to any body for the manner in which they conduct their business. The truth of these statements is supported by a mass of incontrovertible evidence.

Now, the development of the West was largely assisted by capital at high rates of interest by eastern and foreign institutions, such as banks, insurance companies and other concerns dealing in money.

As a matter of policy, banks have always maintained money in short supply—for the more scarce money is kept, the more valuable and more influential it will be.

Eastern Vassal

When it is realized that the debts of the West are owed, in the main, to eastern financial institutions, and to similar institutions in the United States and Great Britain, it will be obvious that the western producer is but a vassal of these concerns. He produces to send the proceeds from his sales of the province to meet interest charges and payments of principal. Moreover the amount of his product with which he has to part to meet his debt charges is determined by its price; and, in the last analysis, the price he gets is determined by the policy of the financial interests to whom he is in debt.

From whatever angle the matter is viewed, the West is in vassalage to these financial institutions. And because of the location of these institutions outside the western provinces, the West derives no benefit, even in the form of crumbs which might fall from the table, in return for the wealth which has been poured out to meet the ever-increasing debt obligations. How can these debt obligations do otherwise than increase when all money is issued in a manner which creates debt and all saving merely pyramids this debt? The effect of such a system on a developing area must be the progressive rise of debt, and this must constitute an ever-increasing drain on the security of the individuals living in that area.

Poppycock Talk

It will be apparent, therefore, that while the present system of finance is in operation, the West will continue to be held in bondage.

The staggering statement recently made by a responsible banker that debt is an asset of the people is just so much poppycock.

The credits of the people are their assets expressed in monetary terms. The debts are their liabilities expressed in the same terms. If the monetary credits of the people automatically increased in proportion to their monetary debts there may be some sense in taking the debt figures as an indication of their progress. But the only place the people's monetary credits are shown is in their deposits in the banks—and a glance at relative rise in the debt and deposit figures for the past years will show that there is no relationship between them.

Debt is a mechanism for control—control of the debtor by the creditor. It is no accident that the outstanding feature of the established financial system is rapidly pyramiding debt everywhere. It has been accompanied by a rapid centralization of effective power in the economic sphere in fewer and fewer hands until today the balance of this controlling power is in the hands of two groups of international bankers.

Ramifications

To give some idea of the staggering ramifications of these financial oligarchies, it is but necessary to cite a report presented to the Congress of the U.S.A. by a Committee of Enquiry in 1912. The commission's findings were:

A "banking trust" did exist; it included five principal banks, which controlled 112 important banks, as well as numerous financial and industrial groups scattered throughout the United States and other parts of the world; the power of the "money trust" was enormous. In adding together the capital sums represented by the banks which formed part of the "trust," and by enterprises dependent upon them, the commission arrived at the almost incredible figure of $22,245,000,000.

The Commission of Enquiry concluded its report in the following impressive terms: "The powerful grip of these men is placed upon the lever which controls all credit, and its wheels turn or stop at their signal."

But, of course, considerable progress has been made since 1912, and the extent of the control wielded by this group of bankers is far greater than it was at that time. Since then they have won a world war at the expense of all the belligerent nations and have been busy consolidating their victory ever since.

Only the Fringe

Yet this is but touching the fringe of the subject. No proper understanding of what is happening in the world is possible without at least a general knowledge of the devastating consequences of the financial system which has been inflicted upon us.

This system is nicely calculated to concentrate power in the hands of the controllers of the system, thus rendering all forms of government subservient to it. Consider for a moment the economic and defeat the authority of these international bankers will perish. The only manner in which these men can be challenged and defeated is through a properly reported by a mass of incontrovertible evidence.

Now, the development of the West was largely assisted by capital at high rates of interest by eastern and foreign institutions, such as banks, insurance companies and other concerns dealing in money.

Democratic government did not give it to us, and so we accepted dictatorship. What did freedom mean to us when we had no security? There can be no freedom without security. Democracy denied us both. So we gave up freedom which meant so little to us that we might have security."

And the fate of these dictatorship nations will be the fate of any democracy that fails to give its people the results they want and have a right to expect.

Rule by the People

To appreciate this, it is necessary to consider the nature of the social system we term democracy.

Democracy has been loosely termed "rule by the people." It would be more correct to describe it as government in accordance with the will of the people. There is a subtle difference.

The basis of democratic government is the sovereignty of the people. In a democracy, the people must be supreme. To be supreme, they must determine and get the results they want from the management of their affairs.

Broadly the results which the people of any country want from the management of their affairs can be summed up as the maximum personal security and the maximum personal freedom. These are the two main objectives of economic endeavor.

Democracy Failure

Let us see how modern democratic institutions are functioning as such. Take Canada—and what is true of Canada is true in a greater or lesser degree of other democratic countries.

Are the people of Canada getting the results they want from the management of their affairs? Are they getting the economic security and freedom they desire? If they are not, then Canada is not a functioning democracy. Let us consider the facts.

We know that in Canada, with vast resources and the other physical means for providing a high standard of living, the people are poverty stricken, insecure, loaded down with debt, and taxed to the limit of endurance. Huge resources of the nation remain undeveloped and yet there is an unemployment problem! Producers could increase production, but they cannot market their products. The people want the goods which could be produced in abundance, but lack the purchasing power to buy even the goods now being produced. Therefore, the cause of this state of affairs is financial.

Insecurity

In short, the people of Canada, far from getting the results they want from the management of their affairs, are having imposed upon them results opposite to those they want. Instead of security and freedom, they are being subjected to poverty, insecurity and regimentation by means of debt and taxation. And what is true of Canada is true in a greater or lesser degree of all democratic countries. Though they have preserved democratic institutions, the people have ceased to be the supreme authority. Thus democratic institutions have ceased to yield them the results they want.

Because the results being imposed on the people in defiance of their democratic will are being imposed through the operation of the financial system, that system has become the effective system of government. So that the controllers of the financial system are the real rulers who permit democratic institutions to operate within the narrow limits they define. Governments should know only too well by this time that their power to govern and provide their people with the conditions they want is limited by the money they can obtain—and this is a matter which our financial rulers control. This is true even in Canada under a nationalized central bank. Has any person noticed a spectacular change in that bank's policy since it was nationalized? This should in itself be sufficiently convincing evidence to dispel the illusion that nationalization can provide any cure for our ills.

Need of Reform

There is a general realization, in this country at least, that the present state of affairs cannot continue without leading to certain disaster. But considerable confusion exists on the question of how a change can be brought about in an efficient and orderly manner. People will agree that there must be a change and then ask, "What is your plan?" Confusion has been made worse confounded by a large number of well-meaning persons getting out plans for creating their idea of Utopia. Usually these Utopias make the average freedom-loving person shudder.

But apart from this, the idea that we have all to agree on some particular plan before there can be any change plays straight into the hands of those who wish to maintain the status quo. A plan is fruitful ground for argument—and a multitude of plans ensures that everybody will be so busy arguing that nothing will be done to change conditions.

What is wanted at this stage is not general agreement on any particular plan or scheme for economic reform, but a definite and decisive action which will restore effective sovereignty to the people so that they can obtain the results they want. Then a plan or scheme can be done.

The people in a democracy are essentially conservative with results. If they get the results they want they are sovereign—and proper democratic government assists the people as such are not interested in how they get these results, any more than they are interested at present in sewage engineering, steel manufacture, telephone technique or any of the methods employed in giving them results of the services they use. They are content to leave such matters to specialists best able to get them the results they want.

Effective Action

The urgent need of the moment is to establish democratic government to meet the daily increasing threat of dictatorship—both military and financial.

The only effective action of which I am aware that holds out any hope of success is to unite the people in a clear demand for the results they want. They want security of economic security and freedom, and to focus this demand in political action. This will not be difficult, because the majority of people are united on the results they desire; the only serious division which exist are on the question of methods.

The results which an overwhelming majority of the people of Canada want from the management of their national affairs can be stated in very definite terms.

It would not be an insuperable task to provide the necessary organization to enable the people to unite in electing representatives pledged to make it their supreme responsibility as servants of their constituents to continuously press for these results and assert the people's sovereignty. Neither would it be difficult for the people to choose as their representatives persons who had an understanding of both their responsibilities as democratic representatives, and how to discharge those responsibilities in parliament.

A parliament elected under such conditions, armed with such a mandate and owing allegiance to none except the people they represented, would rapidly swing into action. The representatives would be concerned with getting results and they would be quick to place the responsibility for obtaining these in the proper quarters.

For example, in the present situation responsibility for the plight of the country due to the operation of the financial system rests with those to whom has been entrusted the administration of our monetary arrangements—namely, the bankers. They are the persons who are supposed to know all about the money business. They claim they do and they should be taken at their word and held responsible for the results of their administration.

Should Act

Parliament, through the proper channels should lay down the results wanted by the people and inform the bankers that these physically possible results have to be provided. Responsibility for devising the necessary monetary methods to facilitate the development of the nation's resources and the distribution of the resulting products would be placed fairly and squarely on the shoulders of the bankers acting under a competent administrative body responsible to the government. And why not? The bankers are the persons who are supposed to know most about monetary matters, and they alone are responsible for the management of the nation's monetary system.

Failure to produce the desired results should call forth severe penalties. Again, why not? This rule operates in every other sphere of our social life.

Acting along these lines would yield spectacular results. It would electrify our monetary authorities into activity in the shortest possible time which of the many schemes of reform being advocated would be so busy arguing that nothing will be done to change conditions. And because they would be responsible for the results, they would take good care to put the necessary reforms into operation with a proper sense of responsibility.

Cannot Escape

Contrast this with what would happen if Parliament told the banks to adopt a particular scheme they regard as unsound in the attitude that it is dangerous, and they would carry it out only under protest. However sound the scheme might be, they could proceed to bungle its application and be absolved from all responsibility for the consequences. But if they have to assume full responsibility for the methods they employ and are judged solely by results, they cannot escape the consequences of failing to achieve success.

This is putting the bankers on the spot—and it is possibly the only way in which the stranglehold of international finance will be broken and democratic rule made a reality. One thing is certain. The bankers will not reform the financial system unless they are forced to do so. Why should they? It operates to their satisfaction and has put them on top of the world. Is it any wonder they resist change and stoutly defend the system against any criticism? Once a dynamic and functioning democracy is established in any

Power for Industry and Development of Natural Resources

THE development of suitable industries based on our natural resources provides employment, creates a market for farm products, stimulates business and raises the standard of living generally. Such development can be brought about by creating confidence in the minds of large and small investors alike that they will be honestly and fairly dealt with by the public and by the management of such enterprises. This and a more widespread spirit of tolerance and co-operation toward industry will go far to bring about the prosperity desired by all.

Alberta's Oil Problem Today Is Largely One Of Transportation

By HERBERT GREENFIELD
President, Alberta Petroleum Association

In 1938 Alberta produced 6,742,000 barrels of oil—an increase over 1937 production of 3,943,000 barrels. There are now 73 wells producing crude in Turner Valley. These 73 wells are capable of producing in the neighborhood of 60,000 barrels per day through a 1-inch orifice.

The field, operating under proration to market demand under the direction and orders of the Alberta Petroleum and Natural Gas Conservation Board, at this date has a total allowable in daily production for the field of 19,500 barrels, which is divided equitably among the 73 wells.

The Conservation Board allots to each well in the field its fair proportion of the available market, based on a formula which takes into consideration:

(a) The rate of flow of the well through a given orifice.

(b) Bottom hole pressure.

(c) Gas-oil ratio.

(d) Acreage allowance.

The daily allowables of individual wells vary from under 100 barrels to over 900 barrels per day under present proration. Four wells in the field are producing over 500 barrels per day. By the end of May at least 5 new wells should be completed in Turner Valley.

As and when demand for oil in the presently available economic marketing area (which comprises Eastern British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and the greater part of Manitoba) increases, or new markets are opened up, the field is in a productive position to meet such demand without departing from good production practice or placing undue strain on the wells.

PRINCIPAL PROBLEM

It will be seen from the above that the principal problem of the Alberta oil industry is markets. Wider markets for Canadian oil are essential in order that active exploration and continued drilling, both in Turner Valley and on the many other prospective oil structures in the province may be aggressively carried on.

Examination of the marketing problem at once involves transportation costs—the ever present problem of Canadian geography. Discussions have taken place with the railway companies looking to the reduction of freight rates on crude from Calgary to Winnipeg to the same basis as the present special crude rate from Calgary to Regina and Moose Jaw, and also a reduction of rates on refined products from Regina and Moose Jaw to Winnipeg—so far without result. Application has now been made by the provincial government and the Alberta Petroleum Association to the Board of Transport Commissioner in the hope that reasonable adjustment may be reached that will enable the Alberta product to more effectively meet threatened competition from imported oil.

According to advices from the department of customs, by the end of April dumping regulations respecting importation of crude of "a class or kind produced in Canada" will become effective. This will affect crude of 39 degrees gravity and higher; a grade comparable to Turner Valley oil. Crude below 39 degrees gravity will not be affected. Foreign crude of below 39 degrees or higher must now be purchased and invoiced at a price equal to the posted field price in the field from which the oil is produced. Otherwise the dumping duty automatically applies and any difference between actual purchase price and posted field price at point of origin becomes payable.

TRANSPORTATION IS KEY

It is expected that these dumping regulations will effectively check importation into Canada of low priced distress oil produced in other than Canadian fields.

There is no question that if Alberta oil is to extend its economic marketing area and meet competition in new territory, that Alberta oil must be transported at lowest possible cost. Eventually that means pipeline transportation. Whether oil development in Alberta has yet reached the point where proven oil reserves in the ground are sufficient to justify construction of a pipeline east or west is a moot question. The indications are that continued drilling will soon definitely settle that point. Production has reached the point where a complete engineering and financial examination of such pipe line service is fully warranted.

TRANSPORTATION BUSINESS

The railways are in the transportation business and if it is not feasible to reduce freight rates on Alberta oil and leave the railways a moderate profit would it not be a logical development for the railways to thoroughly examine the advisability of extending their operations as transportation companies to pipe line transportation. The advantages appear obvious. It should be possible to use existing railway right-of-way to a considerable extent. They would have the advantage of established grades, bridges necessary to carry the line, etc., etc. All of which would materially reduce construction costs.

A word or two with reference to the delegation which went to London representing the Alberta government and the Alberta Petroleum Association may be of interest.

DELEGATION TO LONDON

The delegation comprising the Honorable N. E. Tanner, Minister of Lands and Mines for Alberta; Dr. G. S. Hume, Geologist of the Dominion Government Geological Survey, and Mr W. F. Knode, oil engineer and chairman of the Alberta Conservation Board, proceeded to London at the request of the Chief Canadian Trade Commissioner in London. This request was made as a result of enquiries from many sources in Great Britain for authoritative, authentic, geological and technical information and data on the oil situation here, and its future outlook. The delegation expects to be in London for at least a month. A mission of this practical nature should result in ultimate if not immediate benefit to the development of our oil resources.

NEW DRILLING

Meanwhile, despite the comparative stagnation of business resulting from the complex and uncertain European situation which is reflected in money and share markets everywhere, the drills keep turning in Turner Valley and outlying structures. There will be considerable new drilling in the Valley during the remainder of this year accompanied by the drilling of exploration or "wildcat" wells on other structures. Operators are watching with considerable interest the Anglo-Canadian Company's test well at Stevenville, which is a good promise of favorable results.

Never, at any time, has there been shown such maintained interest by substantial oil people from outside the province in the possibilities of oil development in the foothills and in the plains as in the past twelve months.

Present indications are that 1939 will be a year of real progress in this province.

PROVINCE HAS POSSIBILITIES UNSURPASSED

country, and finance is made subservient to the common weal, the threat of universal dictatorship will very rapidly disappear from the world.

Fear Line of Action

Proof that this is the one line of action feared by the international bankers was demonstrated by the consternation caused in the financial centres of the world when this province passed legislation directed towards putting the bankers on the spot on the lines indicated above.

Face Future

And so we face the future. Within our grasp are the physical means for development and progress presenting unlimited possibilities. All that blocks the path is a system of bookkeeping which we term our financial system. This is being used to centralize control and operate as a system of suppression by a group of international bankers.

The goal being pursued by these international bankers is world domination. To achieve world domination they must first discredit and destroy all democratic institutions. There can be no place for free institutions in a world dictatorship.

Attack No Accident

The concerted attack on democratic institutions under cover of lip service to their preservation, is no accident. But the main obstacle which stands between international finance and its goal of world domination is a united British Empire. So the attack is being concentrated on the disruption and destruction of the Empire. There is plenty of evidence of this throughout the Commonwealth of British Nations. And now the stage is set for embroiling Great Britain in a war, the consequences of which, with the modern weapons of destruction that will be employed, hardly bear contemplation. It will wreck Europe; but it will leave international finance master of the situation unless definite and decisive action is taken, along the lines discussed above, before it is too late.

Canada Can Lead

Canada occupies a unique position to assume the lead in this matter. In fact, in no other country are the conditions so favorable.

In the absence of such decisive action to establish democratic government and overthrow the threatening dictatorship of the money power, I can see no hope for the future. In spite of all the resources, knowledge and opportunity available to us to create a new and glorious civilization, we shall stagger from one crisis to another until war and revolution destroy the remnants of what civilization we have.

NEW USES FOR WHEAT IS SAID CANADA NEED

Dominion Must Enter Into Extensive Scientific Research

WINNIPEG, June 2.—"Canada must enter into intensive scientific research to find new industrial uses for wheat if she is going to retain and expand her wheat markets and keep pace with the rest of the world," said Cecil Lamont on his return from Columbus, Ohio, today. In Columbus he represented the North-West Grain Dealers' Association at the meeting of the Farm Chemurgic Council of the United States. Industrialists and agriculturists from all parts of the States were present.

Large concerns such as the Dupont interests, Corn Products Refining Company, the Ford Motor Company and others had their research men present to outline the latest developments in utilizing products of farm, forest and mine in industrial research.

"Research is continuing to yield many new industrial uses for soya beans, corn and synthetic wool from skim milk. Virtually no comparable scientific work is being done with wheat, although the United States government and the Ford laboratories are commencing to direct attention to this cereal.

GREATEST PROBLEM

"Expansion of markets for wheat is the west's greatest problem today. Science has found an answer to many industrial problems and it may hold a solution to the surplus wheat problem.

"One of the most interesting of new discoveries is the manufacture of silk stockings from substances derived from coal, air and water. This synthetic silk, called 'nylon' is claimed to be superior to silk. Two factories are about to be erected at a cost of $11,000,000 which will bring this new product onto the market early in 1940. A new type of plastic called 'lucite' is being made from the same basic substances as 'nylon.' Lucite is a crystal-clear product similar to glass. Tubes made of 'nylon' will cause a beam of light to go around corners. It is unbreakable and is lighter and clearer than glass, and permits penetration of ultra violet rays.

PRODUCTION INCREASES

"Soya beans received the greatest degree of attention at the meeting. The production of this legume is steadily increasing in the United States. Last year 39,000,000 bushels were produced and this year 8,000,000 acres will be planted. It is only in the last decade that large quantities of this plant have been grown in the United States. Increased production followed the discovery of new industrial uses for soya bean oil for plastic material.

"Ten bushels of soya beans will be used in the manufacture of each car produced in 1940 by one of the largest motor car manufacturers operating in Canada and the United States. They will go into the making of gear parts, steering wheels, dash boards and various other parts.

NEW DISCOVERIES

"Great new discoveries are being made in the manufacture of rayon from wood pulp, and a new factory costing $12,000,000 has just been completed for manufacturing rayon created under a new process from wood pulp.

"Representatives of the United States government informed the meeting that the government would spend $5,000,000 this year on the erecting of four regional research laboratories. These laboratories will be located at Peoria, New Orleans, San Francisco and Philadelphia. Construction of the Peoria plant will commence early in June, and all four will be completed by the end of the year. The Peoria division will conduct research into new industrial uses for wheat, corn and farm wastes. The other plants will seek new uses for cotton, sweet potatoes, peanuts, apples, potatoes, tobacco, fruit and alfalfa. Each of the laboratories will be staffed with 200 scientists and chemists.

SOYA BEAN FLOUR

"With the great developments which are going on in other fields, Canada cannot afford to stand idly by and see new uses created for other farm products which may further reduce the markets for our wheat. There was discussion at the Columbus meeting of uses for soya bean flour as a substitute for wheat flour. The suggestion of the North-West Grain Dealers' Association for a western division of the National Research Council should be acted upon. There is still time for parliament to appropriate funds at the present session to put this laboratory in operation by next fall. Such a laboratory should be devoted mainly to finding industrial uses for wheat in order to hold existing and create new markets for this cereal."

Modern Progress

The pathway for commerce opened by the fur traders are covered by air services. The air lines reach out in all directions, but particularly into the inaccessible north, wherever there is freight business. Pioneers who spent months struggling westward can now cross the continent in less than a day's flying. The Dominion is spanned by two transcontinental railway lines, a highway and an air service; there are great seaports on the two oceans shipping products to every part of the world.

Television experimentation in the United States is in the hands of private enterprise, backed by thousands of stockholders, while in Europe it is in the hands of state officials.

WHAT ALBERTA MAKES MAKES ALBERTA

AUTHORIZED BY GOVERNMENT OF THE PROVINCE • ALBERTA DEPARTMENT • TRADE AND INDUSTRY

QUICK - - MARCH

QUICK MARCH! That command has become familiar to all as we welcome our King and Queen. It is the command which, after all the ranks of men have been formed, numbered and prepared to move, march forward in an orderly manner to a definite objective.

Alberta's Central Marketing Board is ready. Its organization work has been going forward for six months. More than 4,300 retail merchants have enlisted in the ranks ready to march forward under the Interim Program. Manufacturers and others who realize that Alberta must solve her own distribution problems in a sane and orderly manner, are joining with retailers and consumers in their endeavor to promote healthy expansion of Alberta's Industries and an increased consumption of Made-in-Alberta goods.

The salvation of Alberta's Industries and the solution of many of her economic difficulties depend upon the application of COMMON SENSE to the problem of exchanging goods and services.

The forces of progress are ready in their ranks prepared to move forward to their worthy objective.

QUICK MARCH!

HON. E. C. MANNING,
Minister of Trade and Industry.

ORDERLY MARKETING

ALBERTA produces numerous raw products, ships them to distant places for manufacture and brings the finished product back. Transportation charges have to be paid both ways. Those raw products employ workers elsewhere while OUR OWN PEOPLE remain unemployed.

Alberta Money leaves the Province to buy goods which can be and are being made in Alberta. Alberta's people must become more keenly conscious of the economic benefits they enjoy when they BUY ALBERTA-MADE GOODS! Alberta's Industries Employ Alberta's Workers thus increasing their purchasing power. Alberta Industries Pay Taxes and support Alberta's institutions of Education and Government.

THE INTERIM PROGRAM

Does not seek to make Alberta self-sustaining to the exclusion of all imported manufacured goods but it DOES AIM AT APPLYING COMMON SENSE TO THE PROBLEM OF DEVELOPING LOCAL INDUSTRIES, STIMULATING THE DEMAND FOR ALBERTA-MADE GOODS, ENCOURAGING THE ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW INDUSTRIES AND PROVIDING MORE EMPLOYMENT PARTICULARLY FOR THE YOUNGER GENERATION.
